No change South holds for local against Red troop attack Mo-Pac

Two months after its local shops were closed, the Missouri Pacific railroad is still hesitant to say how much longer the layoffs will continue.

On Feb. 11 the local shops laid off 116 employees and shut down operations, an action not seen since Depression days. An earlier layoff of 72 employees occurred Jan. 10.

Harry Hammer, MoPac assistant vice president for public relations, said in St. Louis Friday, "there really has been no change." He said the question of call-backs is "under very active study."

Hammer said the 7 per cent railroad freight increase granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission on March 25 does not in itself justify calling back all laid-off personnel. He said the ICC ruling contained many exceptions as to types of freight "that are of most importance to us."

At the time of the February layoffs, MoPac said the ICC's refusal to grant a freight increase was a major factor.

Hammer said the 7 per cent freight increase, which takes effect April 27, will just about cover wage increases granted by the railroad last January.

MoPac also continues to be hit hard by the recession, said Hammer. "Our business is well below last year at this time," he added. He stated that MoPac has been forced to lay up large numbers of freight cars and locomotives as a result.

Hammer said no MoPac shop personnel (Please see MO-PAC, page 4)

Goals of Ford pitch questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The immediate and overwhelmingly negative congressional reaction to President Ford's $722-million, arms-aid request for Vietnam raises serious questions about his real goals.

Ford made the arms pitch to Congress Thursday night knowing full well both the legislators and the majority of the American people would reject it.

But he also knew that Congress might accept a separate plan in his "State of the World" address to evacuate Americans in South Vietnam by using U.S. troops.

There were signs that Ford was using the aid request — more than double his original proposal — as a cover for the more immediate need of arranging the evacuation.

For instance, the $722 million was arrived at in a curious way, reflecting a lack of certainty that the amount would accomplish anything.

As the administration officials explained, the original $300-million request had become absurd in the face of a changed military situation.

And once it was decided to ask for more aid, the only other recommendation Ford had was the $722-million figure proposed by Army Chief of Staff Frederick C. Weyand upon his return from Vietnam.

The officials said that only time will tell if it is adequate, adding that not every military assessment in the past about Vietnam has been correct.

Why, then, did Ford make what is a quixotic effort at best?

The possibilities include:

—Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger know Vietnam cannot be saved and want to make sure Congress takes the blame by proposing so high a figure it was bound to lose.

—The $722-million request was made in the same way labor unions make inflated wage demands in order to draw a counteroffer closer to their realistic goals.

—An effort was needed to make the Saigon government think there is a chance for aid in order to prevent South Vietnamese from turning on the remaining Americans in bloody reprisals for giving up.

The answers given by administration officials vary from outright rejection to silence.

As to the suggestion that Ford is maneuvering Congress into taking the blame for Vietnam's fall, the officials almost plead that they are not interested in placing blame.

They are equally firm in saying that while the $722 million may or may not be an adequate figure, it is clear that any substantially lower figure would not suffice.

Congress negative on President's requests

Military curbs

He called on Congress to act by the end of next week to clarify restrictions on the use of U.S. troops in Indochina so the troops can be used to protect American lives "by ensuring their evacuation, should this become necessary," and to help pull out up to 200,000 friendly Vietnamese.

"I hope that this authority will never be used, but if it is needed there will be no time for congressional debate," Ford said.

When he reached the portion of his "State of the World" speech in which he appealed for the extra Vietnam aid "without delay," there was an eerie silence through the vast House chamber, dotted with an unusually large number of empty seats.

"The sums I had requested before the major North Vietnamese offensive and the sudden South Vietnamese retreat are obviously inadequate," Ford said. "Half-hearted action would be worse than none. We must act together and decisively."

Reaction

Several longtime war foes, such as Rep. Bella S. Abzug, D-N.Y., shook their heads in disapproval. Freshman Reps. Anthony Moffett, D-Conn., and George Miller, D-Calif., walked out.

In all, the President was applauded only 12 times through the hour-long speech, most of it from Republicans. Half of the bursts came near the end when he appealed for a continued strong defense and warned against destruction of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Initial congressional reaction produced virtually unanimous agreement that Ford should have authority to use U.S. troops to evacuate the 6,000 remaining Americans in South Vietnam. Some members of Congress said they thought the President had that already.

There was less certainty, however, about the possible use of the troops to evacuate what Ford referred to as "those Vietnamese to whom we have a special obligation and whose lives may be endangered should the worst come to pass."

Criticism

Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said he feared using U.S. troops to evacuate large numbers of Vietnamese "would be getting us into a very, very dangerous situation because they could be used all over South Vietnam and the next thing we knew we'd be right back in that war."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., stressed the need to limit whatever authority is given to insure it is not misused at some future date for actions beyond those intended.

The White House had indicated in recent days that Ford would take a conciliatory tone towards the heavily Democratic Congress. The speech was filled with vows to "start afresh" and work with lawmakers "in the spirit of candor and consultation."

However, Ford firmly maintained his earlier stance that more U.S. military aid for South Vietnam was a necessity. That led Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., a long-time war critic, to say, "I'm appalled that a man could continue on such a bankrupt policy."

Vietnam aid

Ford coupled his request for the additional military aid, more than double the $300 million for arms and ammunition he has been unsuccessfully seeking for South Vietnam since January, with an appeal for a $250 million initial installment for food, medical supplies and other humanitarian aid for the hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese refugees.

Cambodia

In contrast, he made no renewal of his $222 million aid request for neighboring Cambodia, declaring "it may be too late" already to prevent the fall of that embattled country to Communist insurgents.

Arson possible cause of fires

Arson was listed as the possible cause of two fires only one block and less than 12 hours apart, fire officials reported.

The first fire at 12:03 a.m. Friday, occurred in a garage at 1907 South Quincy, the home of J. W. Twenter. Damage to the building was estimated at $150 with $50 to the contents.

Arson is suspected because of a lumber fire around 11 p.m. Thursday only two blocks away at 1714 South Prospect. Neither the lumber pile or the garage had any electrical connections. No damage was listed for the lumber.

Shortly after 9:30 a.m. Friday, firemen were called to the Jenny Keele residence at 1909 South Prospect, about a block away from the earlier fire.

This fire was also contained in a garage that had no electrical wiring. Damage was contained to the garage and listed at $250. A 1947 Crosley pick-up truck and a 1951 Crosley stationwagon in the garage were damaged, along with numerous tools. Value for the damage to the contents was set at $350.

Fire officials said that because of the closeness of the fires, arson was a strong possibility.

Police were called to the scene of the Keele fire Friday morning and began an investigation of the fires by questioning area residents.

Fire officials reported that reports on the fires would be sent to the State Fire Marshal's office, but that an investigation would not be asked of the state because of the lack of evidence.

Possibly arson

Sedalia firemen are shown pouring water on Jenny Keele's garage at 1909 South Quincy, Friday morning, after fire did an estimated $250 damage to building and $350 to the contents. Fire officials reported that the cause of the fire could have been arson. Two other fires had been extinguished within a four-block area in less than 12 hours.

Ex-priests form reserve corps

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A need for them exists. Colleagues in the Roman Catholic priesthood want them back. Most of the laity apparently would accept their services. And a growing corps of married ex-priests stand ready to return to ministerial duties.

"We see ourselves as a corps of highly qualified volunteer reserves," a group of the ex-priests says. "We hope ... that members of our reserve corps will be called to active duty, part or full time, individually or severally."

The offer comes from a recently formed group called Corps of Reserve Priests

United for Service, or CORPUS for short, set up in Chicago, to gather enlistments of former, mostly married priests available for return to duty.

It estimates there now are about 7,000 married priests in the country. As the group began efforts to gain recognition of their qualifications for restoration to priestly service, about 300 of 900 contacted so far have indicated readiness to re-enter it.

"We believe that most of the members of the faith community regret our absence from the roles we once had, many bishops and many of our brother priests could use our help and would welcome our assistance ... in ministries not presently open to us," they say.

Meanwhile, representatives of most of their former coworkers still in the priesthood, the National Federation of Priests' Councils, urged that a "recertification process" be developed to restore married priests to "full, active priestly ministry."

Roman Catholic leaders lately have cited a sharpening shortage of priests, with U.S. seminary enrollments down by about 50 per cent, and with the total of active priests declining by 4,000 in the last decade as a result of deaths and resignations exceeding new ordinations.

Also, a recent survey by the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago found that a heavy majority of American Roman Catholics, 79 per cent of them, favor allowing married priests.

Although a married priest is "laicized" under current Church practice, thereby being deprived of the authorization to exercise his priestly functions, he technically remains a "priest forever" according to the Catholic ordination rite.

CORPUS, the American group of married ex-priests offering to serve, suggested they could be put back on duty as "extraordinary ministers of Holy Communion," perhaps in Sunday preaching, at retreats, in visiting and blessing the sick, as emergency or substitute chaplains, as part-time pastoral associates or other duties.

What's a mother to do?

By MYRON L. BELKIND
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Shri Mataji, the Holy Mother of the Divine Light Mission, says she has named her oldest son to replace his brother Maharaj Ji as guru of the movement because her youngest son became nounced for the rival gurus to celebrate the Hindu spring harvest holiday.

The Denver headquarters said Maharaj Ji would hold his in Lucknow, in northern India. Shri Mataji and Bhagwan Ji plan their celebration at Hardwar, in the Himalayan foothills she had renounced Maharaj Ji because she and Bhagwan Ji wanted a share of the funds collected in America.

"There is no jealousy about this," she said. "No guru or holy person should want money."

Mental health workshop is set

Mid-life crises will be the focus of a one-day workshop for Mid-Missouri area clergy and other interested persons April 18 in Columbia.

Sponsored by the Mid-Missouri Mental Health Center through a federal grant for the enhancement of clergy mental health skills, the workshop will feature the Rev. Dr. James L. Travis, director of religious therapy at Central State Hospital, Milledgeville, Ga.

The workshop will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. next Friday at the Holiday Inn-East in Columbia.

a playboy after he moved to the United States.

"Whatever a mother does, she does for the good of the child," said the widow of the founder of the movement. "Once he has fallen from his high pedestal because of his own misdeeds, he cannot deserve any more to be respected because he has broken the discipline and ideals that beehove a guru. But I will accept him as a son any time."

Bal Bhagwan Ji, 24, is her choice for the new leader of the movement, which claims more than 8 million devotees, most of them in India. Maharaj Ji, the youngest of four brothers, is now 17 and has been the guru of the movement since his mother blessed him as a Perfect Master after the death of her husband in 1966.

Shri Mataji in a statement last week accused Maharaj Ji of adopting "a despicable, non-spiritual way of life" while living for the past two years in the United States. His headquarters in Denver, Colo., says he returned to India this week to oust his mother and oldest brother from the Mission, but he has not surfaced yet.

There is speculation the youth may be trying to assess his strength in India before making a move. A test could come this weekend, when separate festivals have been anon the banks of the sacred Ganges.

Interviewed today in the Mission's headquarters in New Delhi with her new guru sitting beside her, the 49-year-old mother blamed the downfall of her youngest on a handful of American associates, including his 26-year-old secretary, whom he married last year.

"They have spoiled him," she said, speaking in Hindi. "These people, because of getting so many donations, have corrupted themselves and Maharaj Ji."

"They are using him like a hen that lays golden eggs, as a tool to get more and more money and gifts for a few American followers who are living in a high style."

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Your leg (foot) being pulled

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have several friends who are going to a foot reflexologist, who manipulates reflex "buttons" located in the feet to provide relief for aches and pains. As I understand it, each reflex is said to be related to its corresponding part of the body, and massaging it in a certain way brings relief to that part of the body. What do you think of this? Can it be harmful if used correctly?

Dear Reader — It sounds to me like a good way to get your leg, or should I say foot, pulled. Any benefits it will have on a person's health are strictly psychological.

The harm is that someone who may need good medical attention may delay seeking competent help while having his or her feet "manipulated."

Dear Dr. Lamb — A couple of weeks ago I visited a friend in the hospital. He was concerned because he couldn't determine the time of day, so I loaned him my wrist watch.

His condition grew worse and he died some 10 days later.

Then I learned that he was being treated for cancer of the prostate and had been given radium treatments and cobalt treatments.

The hospital returned my watch, however, I am now skeptical that the watch could have been worn by the deceased during these treatments.

Could the watch now be radioactive or harm me in any way if I wear it again?

Dear Reader — Don't give it another thought. The watch will not give you any radiation at all and it will not harm you in any way.

A more practical point is that many watches can be magnetized by electrical equipment used in hospitals and it is possible that your watch may be magnetized and not function properly.

Lehr explains reasons for over-sight in audit

State Auditor George Lehr, in a statement released Thursday afternoon, explained that the $1,635 receipt discovered recently by Fair employees was not detected in the recent state audit of 1974 Fair financial records because a copy of the receipt was not kept with the Fair escrow account records.

In his audit report released March 21, Lehr stated $2,289 was missing from 1974 Fair escrow accounts. Lehr's office performed the audit earlier this year after being asked to do so by State Director of Agriculture James Boillot. With the discovery of the $1,635 receipt, the amount of unaccounted money has been reduced to $654.

The receipt, it was learned Thursday, was uncovered soon after the audit report was released by Mrs. Mayme McGirk, chief Fair clerk, and Duane Slagel, 105 Southwest Boulevard Court, who supervised ticket-selling operations during the Fair.

It was earlier incorrectly reported by the Associated Press that the receipt was for $1,700. The $1,635, Lehr explained, was withdrawn from a Fair escrow account to pay state sales taxes that were due on season ticket sales held prior to the Fair. This action, a spokesman for Lehr's office said Thursday, represented "questionable accounting procedures . . . because good money management dictates if money is due on an account, you withdraw the money to pay from that same account."

Because the state audit was confined to examining escrow accounts, Lehr said, "Our auditors did not discover that this sales tax payment had been made."

Also the spokesman said, when this "questionable" transaction transpired, "a copy of the receipt should at least have been placed in the escrow account records. This was not done and because it was not done, it was not uncovered in the audit."

Lehr recommended that in the future all payments involving season ticket sales be made only from accounts established to handle such sales. Lehr also advised the receipts for all disbursements from escrow accounts be kept with the escrow account records.

The discovery of the receipt "does not change my audit finding of inadequate financial control and disregard of established accounting procedures," Lehr told The Democrat-Capital.

Boillot and Lehr both expressed hope that the remaining $654 still unaccounted for in the escrow accounts will turn up in the course of the continuing in-house investigation.

Connally trial moves to close

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's bribery case against former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally boils down to one man's word against another's.

Connally's chief defense lawyer Edward Bennett Williams today is expected to file a routine motion asking the judge to direct a verdict of innocent. Arguments on the motion were scheduled for next Monday when the trial resumes in federal court.

Before resting their case Thursday, the prosecutors had presented 36 witnesses and a mass of documentary evidence. But only one witness swears Connally took the money.

Former dairy industry lawyer Jake

Jacobsen testified he gave Connally two illegal $5,000 payoffs in 1971 for Connally's efforts in persuading the Nixon administration to raise milk prices. He swears he and Connally later tried to cover up the crime in 1973.

But Jacobsen has admitted that in the past he committed perjury, and that in pleading guilty to bribing Connally he got the government to reduce charges against him.

During a day and a half of cross-examination, Jacobsen also conceded his memory was hazy about some details of the story, including whether there had been two or three $5,000 payoffs.

To bolster Jacobsen's story, the prosecutors, led by Asst. Special Prosecutor Frank M. Tuerkheimer, produced a pile of bank records, appointment books, an airplane log, a hotel room-service check, bundles of cash and other documentary evidence.

The documents show Jacobsen was in Connally's Treasury Department office on the two dates in 1971 when Jacobsen says Connally took the payoffs. The documents also show Jacobsen opened bank safe deposit boxes just before each meeting.

Connally denies he took the money in the first place. Jacobsen says only the two of them were present during all of their crucial meetings. Barring a directed verdict, the jury must decide whom to believe.

Conference committee debates benefits bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The House and Senate have reached an impasse on a bill to boost unemployment benefits, sending the measure Thursday to a joint conference committee of both houses to negotiate a compromise.

As an emergency appropriations bill also was sent to be ironed out in a conference committee, the Senate moved ahead by preliminarily approving a bill allowing bigger trucks on Missouri highways.

The House and Senate each approved different versions of the unemployment and appropriations measures and refused to budget on their stances, prompting the leaders to set the conference meetings next week.

The House bill would put the maximum unemployment benefit at $90 while the Senate's ceiling would be $85 per week.

The Senate emergency appropriations bill is about $1 million higher than the House bill.

The big truck bill in the Senate would extend the legal size of trucks on Missouri highways from 55 feet to 60 feet and boost the weight limit from 72,000 pounds to 80,000 pounds.

The bill was amended to increase state fees for trucks by 10 per cent to help offset the estimated $25 million in increased highway maintenance costs that would be brought about by the larger trucks.

In the House, final approval was given to

Downs case heard in Boonville court

BOONVILLE — The jury trial of David Downs, 17, 632 East 16th, Sedalia, charged with second degree burglary and stealing, entered its second day here Friday morning.

Informed sources told The Democrat-Capital that the trial is expected to last most of Friday. Information on events in the trial were not available at noon Friday.

Downs' case is being heard here on a change of venue from Pettis County. He was charged Nov. 19 with stealing more than $1,000 worth of drugs and merchandise from the Flat Creek Veterinary Hospital, 1701 West Main, on Sept. 25.

In his petition for a change of venue, Downs maintained that the inhabitants of Pettis County are prejudiced against him as the result of publicity on his case.

Downs is currently free on $3,500 bond.

Consumer's East market burglarized

About $200 in merchandise was stolen sometime Thursday night when thieves burglarized Consumer's Market, 701 East Broadway, police reported.

A camera, several watches, a .22 caliber rifle and other undetermined items were reported taken. Two showcases in the store were broken into.

A front door glass was broken to gain entry to the building. Police reported that they are working on a "good lead" in connection with the burglary. Police also said they did not believe this burglary is related to the burglary of the Consumer's Market in the Thompson Hills Shopping Center several week ago.

An $18 battery charger was taken from the Stout Salvage Co., State Fair Blvd., Wednesday night, police reported.

Entry to the building was gained by prying off a padlock to the office. The theft was reported at 9:45 a.m. Thursday.

Hearnes testimony interrupted briefly

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The first hitch in the voluntary appearance of Warren E. Hearnes before a federal grand jury apparently developed today after 50 minutes of questioning in the third day of the former governor's testimony.

Hearnes came out of the grand jury room to confer with his attorneys, who were standing in a corridor a few feet away.

"There is a little question..." Hearnes said as he went into the legal huddle.

Bert C. Hurn, U.S. district attorney who is conducting the questioning in association with one of his assistants, Paul Anthony White, came out of the jury room four or five minutes later.

Hurn was asked what point had arisen to cause the interruption, but before he could answer the question, Hearnes came back to the door of the grand jury room and indicated he was ready to resume the interrogation.

In less than a minute, however, Hearnes came out of the jury room again, followed by Hurn and White, and after a brief impromptu conference in the corridor among all of the attorneys they all went to a conference room in the U.S. attorney's office.

The conference ended about 20 minutes later, and Hearnes returned to the grand jury chambers. A lawyer for Hearnes said no important problem had developed.

During the brief period Hearnes returned to the grand jury room the first time, his attorneys characterized the problem as unimportant technicalities but declined to elaborate. There was some indication the former governor might have been asked a question in which he felt he should invoke the confidential relationship of attorney and client.

The ex-governor's lawyers are R.J. Slater, a partner in the St. Louis law firm with which Hearnes is associated, and two Kansas City attorneys, Max Foust and Duke W. Ponick Jr.

Hearnes had undergone more than nine hours of questioning before today's session.

"They kept asking me if I was benefiting financially from various transactions" while he was governor, Hearnes told newsmen. "They meant was I getting any money and I told them no."

He said it was obvious the grand jury and government attorneys "are looking for unreported income."

Hearnes acknowledged many of the questions dealt with his transactions with Delton L. Houtchens, who was state chairman of the Democrat Party while Hearnes was governor.

Hearnes is running for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate in 1976. Asked how the inquiry was affecting his campaign, he said, "It depends on how it comes out."

He also said: "The grand jury has been very fair to me, and no matter how it comes out I am glad that I came here. The adversaries, the government attorneys, have been courteous and not overbearing."

He declined to comment about a copyright story in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat Thursday. The account said the grand jury apparently was attempting to determine whether there was a conspiracy in a transaction between two Missouri banks and the late J. V. Conran, a southeast Missouri political leader.

Conran reportedly purchased long-term municipal bonds and sold them to the Mercantile Trust Co., of St. Louis at a profit of about $60,000 to himself.

Stanley Cup

—The Stanley Cup for hockey is the oldest trophy competed for by professional athletes in North America. It was donated by Frederick Arthur, Lord Stanley of Preston, who purchased the trophy for 10 guineas ($50 at that time) to be presented to the amateur champs of Canada. Since 1920, when the National Hockey Association took possession of the cup, it is symbolic of professional ice hockey supremacy.

Local tax support for college reduced

Although the budget of State Fair Community College has more than tripled since its founding, that portion supported by local taxes has shrunk from 60 per cent to 20 per cent.

College President Fred Davis made this point in a talk before the Kiwanis Club Thursday noon at the Bothwell Hotel.

Davis said federal aid accounts for the biggest portion of the SFCC budget, and that efforts are being made to increase the state share, which he said is lower than it should be based on junior college enrollment in Missouri.

Davis said about 60 per cent of the students at SFCC are enrolled in career or vocational education, possibly the largest proportion in the state.

Nearly 100 per cent of such graduates are being placed in jobs, he added.

Davis said SFCC graduates also make good transitions to four-year colleges. "Our students have done very well," he stated.

Davis praised the staff at SFCC, saying it was his greatest cause for pride as president.

Touching on the $2.3 million Yeater Learning Center which will be built on the campus, Davis said the Board of Trustees expects to let a contract by April 28. He said the college will still have a crucial need for a permanent vocational-technical building, however.

Jim Rice introduced the program.

Also appearing on the program were Ken and Cynthia Ratterree, members of the Covenant Players from Reseda, Calif. They presented a brief religious sketch, "The Name of the Game."

The Covenant Players, composed of several troupes located throughout the country, present contemporary dramatic sketches dealing with Christian dynamics.

The Rev. Charles Crismer Jr., a Salvation Army evangelist, was a guest of Capt. Robert Quinn.

Rezoning request is given approval

The Sedalia Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night approved a request to rezone the southwest corner of Ninth and Monroe from R-1 (residential) to R-3 status for apartments and multiple dwellings.

Carl J. Meyer, owner of the property, plans to build a duplex apartment building in that location, commission chairman Ray Hendricks explained. Hendricks said part of the block already had been zoned R-3 before Meyer's request.

Ann Landers

Handwriting no proof of person's character

Dear Ann Landers: Can a person's true character be revealed through his handwriting?

My 25-year-old son has fallen in love with a 30-year-old woman. She has him completely wrapped up. He is walking on air, and it's simply nauseating.

I happen to know Dennis gave this woman a very expensive piece of jewelry, although he still owes his father a large sum of money.

On three occasions, I have been in Madame Svengali's company when Dennis was not present. All three times she showed a very bad temper. The last time she lost control of her mouth, she realized she went too far. The following day she wrote me a letter of apology. I took that letter to a handwriting analyst and this is what he said: "The woman is potentially dangerous. She is hiding some sort of secret."

Should I mind my own business or am I obligated to tell my son? I happen to agree with the handwriting analyst. I'm sure Dennis has never seen her temperamental side. Please advise. — Mrs. Z

Dear Z: I do not believe a person's handwriting can reveal that he or she is potentially dangerous and is "hiding" something.

If Dennis is unaware of his lady friend's temperamental side he is sure to witness it eventually. Should she manage to keep him completely fooled until after they are married, that's his hard luck. A 25-year-old man should not be clued in by his mother, so MYOB, dearie.

Dear Ann Landers: I found out yesterday that my husband has a $25,000 life insurance policy and the beneficiary is his former wife.

Should I bring this matter to his attention? I am terribly hurt and feel he is not playing fair. I can't give you more details because I don't want to reveal my identity. We live in a small town and I would surely be recognized. Please express your opinion. — Second Best Isn't Good Enough

Dear Second: Too bad you can't give me more details — such as how long was your husband married to his first wife? How many children did they have? How old are you? How old is SHE? Did that woman help your husband become a financial success? Did she take care of his mother in her old age?

After you read my response I doubt that you'll want to "call the matter to his attention." You might get some answers you don't care to hear.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 25, my fiance is 29. We've been going together for two years and are very much in love. Don was married briefly when he was 18. This will be my first marriage and I want it to work.

Everything is perfect except one area of disagreement that is killing me. Don doesn't want children. He says kids make him nervous. He can't stand his sister's children. (They are spoiled and ill-behaved.) I have tried to explain that our children would be different. Don says he doesn't want to take the chance.

My parents are dying to have grandchildren and I am their

The Jaycees' annual television auction last Saturday for the Children's Therapy Center netted $5,800, it was reported Thursday. The figure was considered "consistent with amounts raised in the past."

The auction was made possible through the donation of air time by television station KMOS here. Seven auctioneers volunteered their time and local merchants donated the merchandise sold. Jaycee officials noted that during the past 10 years, the group has raised more than $50,000 for the Therapy Center.

Aid for orphans cover-up for guilt

WASHINGTON — How does one describe the great mass of Americans? Gullible? Naive? Sentimental? Full of guilt? Confused? Or simply forgetful?

Rowan

You didn't need to be a foreign policy expert in 1972, when we with drew from the war in Vietnam, to know that the U.S. had lost the war. With public opinion in the U.S. increasingly hostile to the idea of American boys dying in what seemed a futile struggle, and with a presidential election coming up, Richard M. Nixon bailed out. And there must have been a thousand editorials and columns written speculating that all Nixon and Henry Kissinger hoped for was "a decent interval" before the Communists took over. If the Saigon forces couldn't hack it with 550,000 U.S. troops and incredible U.S. bombings to support them, there was no real hope that, left on its own, the Thieu regime could prevail.

So now that the Communists are doing precisely what almost every American figured they would, how come all this supposed shock, all this scapegoating, this tendency on the part of some Americans to cry, "Mea culpa"?

And what's all this front-page fuss about hauling several hundred orphans out of South Vietnam? The Children's Bureau of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare tells me there are perhaps 100,000 to 120,000 U.S. babies available for adoption, with 60 per cent estimated to be white and 40 per cent black, Puerto Rican, Asian or of other non-white origins.

Not even a newspaper columnist is supposed to be callous enough to question the "rescue" of war orphans, and I don't. I do suggest, though, that those 100,000 homeless U.S. infants need rescuing from some forces every bit as devastating as the Communist hordes which are viewed as a threat to the babies of South Vietnam.

Most of those U.S. tots are constantly imperiled by hunger and malnutrition, exposure to the cold of wind-pierced tenements, rats that bite in the night, leaded paint that falls off the walls, violent criminals who strike day or night, drug peddlers who won't even wait for them to reach pubescence, and worst of all, a society telling them when they're 15 years old exactly what they heard when they were 15 months old: "To hell with you."

So who's kidding whom when we put on this great show of national compassion which includes our President carrying Vietnamese orphans off planes and Mrs. Ford wishing she could adopt one? Are we trying to assuage feelings of inner guilt because we failed to see the battle through? Because we won't now bomb Hue, Danang, Haiphong and Hanoi and try to push back the Communist tide? Because the Congress won't even give the Thieu regime $300 million more for arms its soldiers can use to beat back some more women and babies who want to get on rescue vessels?

The President and others around him profess to worry that the world will cease to respect us because we failed to protect the Saigon regime the way we promised. What an absurdity! We did for South Vietnam what no other country would dream of doing. We gave the lives of 55,000 of our finest young men; we saw 300,000 of our boys maimed; we poured in $150 billion and wrecked our economy. What country in the world has the right to say we should have done more when they did so shamefully little?

And why should our officials encourage self-flagellating paroxysms of shame on the part of Americans when it long ago became apparent that even if we doubled the number of dead and wounded GIs, or the amount of money poured in, the Thieu forces would still collapse?

The route to the firm respect of the rest of the world is for us to show the same passionate concern for our own troubled babies (and teenagers) that some people have shown for those Vietnamese orphans.

Only when we heal our own wounds, deal with our own injustices, can we once again bid to make the whole world well.

Dangers inherent in public unions

The Missouri House has taken up what could be the hottest bill of the current legislative session — one that would permit collective bargaining by public employees.

Attention this week was focused on public school teachers and whether they should be permitted to strike. But while teacher strikes may be the most controversial aspect of House Bill 343, its import goes far beyond that.

Missouri law now provides only that governmental units "meet and confer" with employe organizations. The present bill, like those in numerous other states as well as the federal level, would open up the entire, vast field of public employment to union organizers.

And this would be compulsory unionism. The "agency shop" provision of the current Missouri bill, which requires non-union workers to pay a service fee to the exclusive representative that is the equivalent of union dues, achieves exactly the same purpose as a closed shop.

As far as public strikes are concerned, which would be the logical next step in the process, we have already seen the handwriting on the wall as scores of supposedly illegal strikes have erupted over the country. Once they were given legal sanction, the sky would be the limit.

Yet Rep. Dan O'Toole, D-St. Louis, told his colleagues Wednesday that such legislation would actually inhibit strikes!

As far as teachers are concerned, approval of H.B. 343 would only speed up the process which is the announced goal of the NEA- and AFL-CIO-dominated teachers' unions: placing all educational decisions exclusively in the hands of teachers.

Catherine Barrett, a former NEA president, made this clear when she bragged that her organization was "the biggest strike force in the country and we are determined to control the direction of education."

Collective bargaining of public employes will encourage the creation of mutual back-scratching arrangements between unions and politicians. The politicians will court the favor of the unions to get and stay elected, and the unions will do the same to achieve their demands.

Under such a system there can only be one loser: the public.

Merry-go-round

Kissinger, envoys differ on Portugal

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger reportedly has made up his mind that Portugal is turning Communist, but he can't seem to keep an ambassador there who will agree with him.

Last November, he summarily fired Ambassador Stuart Nash Scott, who disagreed that a Communist takeover of Portugal was inevitable. Scott was replaced by Ambassador Frank Carlucci, whose cables from Lisbon also dispute the Kissinger view.

Sources close to Kissinger say he is extremely sensitive about Communist encroachment in the Mediterranean area. When Portugal took Communists into the government, he feared this might stimulate similar developments in Spain and Italy.

He couldn't be shaken from the conviction, according to our sources, that Portugal's new military leaders were crypto-Communists. He concluded direly, therefore, that Portugal had begun the long slide into communism.

But from Lisbon, Ambassador Scott warned this idea could become "the greatest self-fulfilling prophecy in history," diplomatic sources say. His cables to the State Department urged Kissinger to extend economic assistance to the new Portuguese government and, thereby, to bolster the moderates who want to keep Portugal in the Atlantic Alliance.

Kissinger dispatched a special team to Portugal to make an independent assessment. They returned with a report that essentially backed up Scott.

A congressional study mission, headed by Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Tex., has also supported the ambassador. "Scott responded to the governmental changes," declared the study, "...with a calm display of good judgment. He was the first ambassador to visit the head of the new government and to offer the good wishes of the United States."

But Kissinger preferred to believe a few prominent, retired Americans who lived in Portugal part-time. They had been pampered by the deposed dictatorship, which kept prices down, provided cheap labor and policed the streets. For wealthy foreigners, Portugal offered gracious living during the firm, 50-year reign of dictators Salazar and Caetano.

Some of these retired Americans called the State Department to warn darkly that Lisbon was listing far to the left. One who had Kissinger's ear was retired Adm. George Anderson, a former Navy chief, former ambassador to Portugal and present chairman of the President's Intelligence Advisory Board.

Anderson maintains a fashionable home in the gentle, southern province of Algarve. He helped to convince Kissinger, according to our sources, that Portugal was slipping into Communist clutches.

Another retired American with direct access to Kissinger was George Woods, former head of the World Bank, who has a house near Lisbon. He was somewhat less dogmatic, however, than was Anderson.

Because of Kissinger's "allergy to Communist problems around the Mediterranean," say our sources, he was "predisposed" to believe the reports from the American colony in Portugal.

He reacted, first, by firing Ambassador Scott. One source described the handling of the distinguished, 68-year-old ambassador as "brutal."

Then Kissinger adopted a wait-and-see policy toward the new Portuguese government. This weakened the moderates, such as President Francisco da Costa Gomes and Foreign Minister Mario Soares.

It took pressure from Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., after a stopover in Portugal, to get Kissinger grudgingly to release $25 million in credits and grants to the new government. But his basic attitude, according to our sources, remains unchanged.

Meanwhile, 44-year-old Frank Carlucci, a former trouble shooter for ex-President Richard Nixon, has taken over as the new U.S. ambassador. He hadn't been in Lisbon long before he began echoing Scott's views.

Carlucci has argued that the United States must take a "constructive view" toward Lisbon's leftist leaders and work with them. "Henry," said one source, "is rather unhappy."

For the record, the State Department had no comment on the dismissal of Ambassador Scott. A spokesman said, however, that "the secretary has full and complete confidence in Ambassador Carlucci."

Footnote: Scott literally got off on the wrong foot with Kissinger. Called to the State Department by former Secretary of State William Rogers to be legal adviser, Scott didn't arrive until Kissinger had assumed control. The new secretary took one look at the white-haired Scott who was then walking with the aid of a cane because of a bad hip. Kissinger shipped him off to Portugal, which was then considered a safe, noncontroversial post. Scott had been in the country only three months when the dictatorship fell in a bloodless coup one year ago.

DETROIT DILEMMA: A confidential study by former General Motors vice president John DeLorean reports the small cars President Ford has prescribed for fuel economy will increase auto deaths by 40 per cent unless there is "rapid phase-in of air bags."

The DeLorean study, commissioned by Allstate Insurance, says the less safe small cars will make up 65 per cent of the market by 1985. But without the air bags and other safety devices, the upsurge will lead to 2.7 million deaths and injuries from autos by 1985. Costs of the safety devices, he suggests, could be more than met by decreased manufacturers' costs for smaller cars and by dropping useless options.

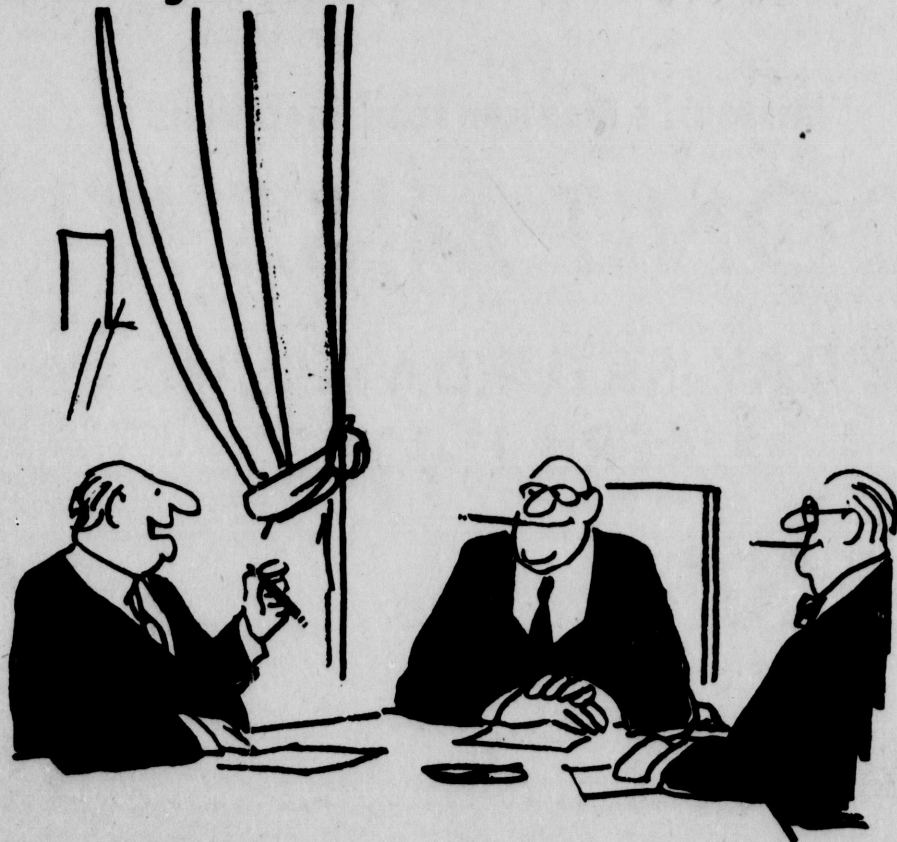

"Vinyl roofs, racing stripes and trim, super wheel disks, etc., have never saved anyone's life, while air bags certainly have," concludes the former Detroit mogul.

Under the premiership of George Grenville, the British passed a number of acts that led to the first symptoms of alienation between America and the mother country. The principal of these was the Stamp Act. Others were the Currency Act and the American Revenue (or Sugar) Act. Not strictly part of the Grenville program but generally blamed on him was the Quartering Act, requested by General Gage, The World Almanac notes.

'May I say who's calling?'

By DOUG KNEIBERT

Not having a secretary of my own, I am being denied one of the rights enjoyed by the more fortunate: the privilege of not being in if the wrong party calls.

It used to be that when you placed a telephone call, the secretary simply said, "one moment, please," and then connected you with B.J. or whomever it happened to be you were calling.

A few years ago, however, someone dreamed up the response, "May I say who's calling, please?" It has since been universally adopted as a mandatory work rule by the secretaries union.

You can't even call the local dog pound anymore without getting a "May I say who's calling, please?"

The question, of course, has only one conceivable purpose: to enable the party you are calling to decide whether he wants to talk to you at all.

Say, for instance, you are calling, for the sixth time since Dec. 5, 1974, the delivery truck driver who did a $243.78 job on your grill, to inquire about when he might get around to paying for it. Like he said he would.

If you tell the office secretary your real name (and after some muffled exchanges in the background), you will be informed that Mr. Shultz just left for a three-week business trip to Puget Sound.

This sort of thing got completely out of hand around our house the other day. After getting to work, I discovered that one of the kids had failed to completely unload the groceries from the car. I grasped this immediately when I noticed what used to be a gallon of Neopolitan ice cream in the back seat.

I called home.

"May I tell him who's calling?" said a voice.

I said you sure could, and to make it fast.

"I'm sorry, he seems to have stepped out for a moment," the voice came back. "Could I take your number, and I'll have him return the call."

True to form, he never did.

It's a pity The Democrat-Capital doesn't have the staff to cover every artistic event that comes to Sedalia, of which there are many.

One slipped by last Friday that didn't receive due credit. This was the performance by the Collegiate Choir of Illinois Wesleyan University, held at the First United Methodist Church.

Currently on tour, the 45-voice choir under the direction of David Nott performed a concert of sacred music spanning from the Renaissance to the present, with accompaniment by various musical instruments of the periods. One competent critic who was there called it a memorable concert of outstanding quality.

One of the tenors in the Collegiate Choir is David Rayl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rayl, 2342 West Second.

Spirits welcome

Figureheads are about as old as sailing itself. The art grew from the ancient custom of decorating ships' bows to invite guiding spirits to dwell in the vessels. Throughout the centuries, nations decorated their ships' bows. During the Commonwealth of England period, the ship "Naseby" carried an image of the Lord Protector himself, Oliver Cromwell.

Then he made the book play of the jack of clubs as written up many times in this and other bridge columns.

This is the only club he could have led to bring in four club tricks, but declarer had no defense against it. Actually, he covered with the queen. East took his ace; led a club back to West's king and scored the two final tricks with the 10 and seven.

Who says that the so-called "Book Hands" don't come up all the time? Here is one from the European championships.

North scraped the bottom of the barrel with his two-club response, but felt that he had to make another bid. South might well have rested in three spades, but he did go on to three notrump.

Manuel Antunes of Portugal made his normal opening lead of the four of diamonds. South won in his hand, led a heart to dummy's king and a spade back to his jack.

Royals open home season tonight

Fitz gets call against Twins

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A crowd of between 21,000 and 25,000 is expected tonight when the Kansas City Royals launch their home campaign against the Minnesota Twins.

The first of a three-game series between the two baseball teams begins at 7:30 p.m., CST.

Al Fitzmorris, who had a 13-6 record last season, will pitch for the Royals and Vic Albury, 8-9, for the visiting Twins.

Fitzmorris, whose 2.79 earned run average in 1974 was the best among Royals starters, has seen little action of late.

"Fitzie hasn't pitched in 10 or 12 days," said Royals Manager

Jack McKeon, "but he has been effective against Minnesota."

McKeon said the rainy weather in California, where the Royals split two games with the Angels, "took a little of the defensive edge off a couple of our guys, especially Fran Healy."

The Royals' last two exhibition games, both with the Giants in California, were rained out as was the second scheduled game with the Angels.

McKeon indicated he will use much the same line-up against Minnesota tonight he utilized against the Angels except that Jim Wohlford will start in place of Vada Pinson in right field.

Cards back John Denny

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For rookie hurler John Denny, it was a whole new experience. For Al Hrabosky, it was just another job.

"I think I was jittery the whole game. You don't know how happy I feel," said the 22-year-old Denny Thursday after chalking up his first major league win for the St. Louis Cardinals, 7-2, over the Montreal Expos.

"I had great backing. I had a little problem getting my stuff over, so I just laid it in there and hoped they hit it at some body."

The lanky right-hander, whose prior major league experience consisted of two innings in relief last season, scattered just five hits before being removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh when the Cardinals grabbed a 3-2 lead.

Lou Brock then slammed a bases-loaded double to highlight a four-run eighth and Hrabosky, in relief of Denny, retired the Expos without a hit in the final two innings.

"Man, it was nice to get a cushion like that," said Denny with a smile. "I was drying my hair and listening to the radio. When he (Brock) hit the double, I had to turn the dryer off to hear what was going on."

Both Denny and Manager, Red Schoendienst were pleased by Hrabosky's effort, but the reliever, who was 8-1 with St. Louis last season, indicated he wasn't that comfortable with a five-run advantage in the ninth.

"I like it better with a slim lead. It makes you work harder, bear down more," he said. "When you have a big lead, you begin thinking, 'I can give up one run.' Then you give up one and you think you can give up another. It's a bad way to think."

The Expos took an early 2-0 lead on an error and two singles in the first and a home run by Mike Jorgensen in the third, but the Cards' Keith Hernandez followed a single by Bake McBride and a walk to Ted Simmons with a triple to left off starter Woodie Fryman in the fourth to tie the match.

Ted Sizemore made it 3-2 in the seventh when he smacked a one-out, bases-loaded grounder to shortstop Tim Foli, but the Expos failed to turn the double play and Ken Reitz scored from third.

Hrabosky then drew a bases-loaded walk in the eighth off losing Montreal reliever Dale Murray, forcing in Hernandez, then Brock's double to the left-centerfield wall wrapped it up.

But Brock, who had struck out three times and walked in four previous trips to the plate, shrugged off the clinching blow.

"The game wasn't over yet," said the fleet left fielder. "I could have popped up or grounded out. You just play the game."

KU's McDonald is no HAM-burger

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The University of Kansas has a baseball player named Ronald McDonald.

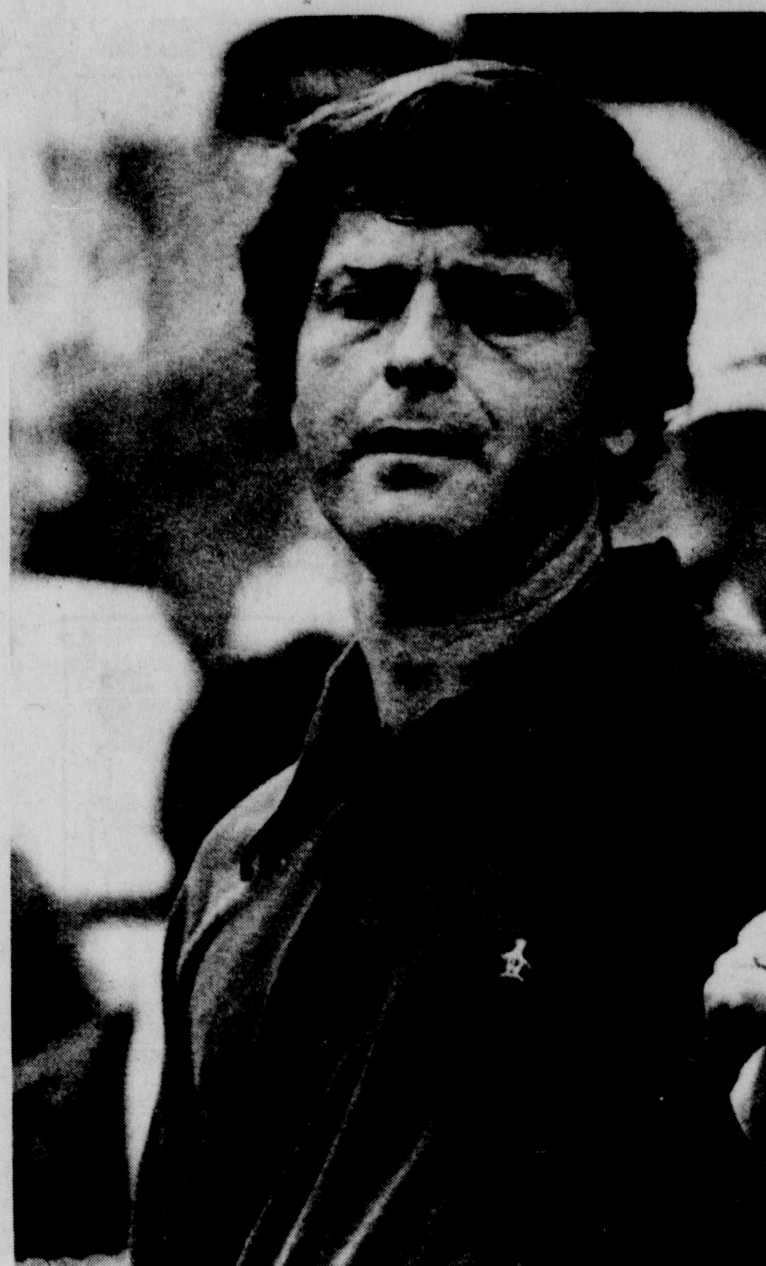

McDonald is the Jayhawks' shortstop and leads the club in batting with a .404 mark.

McDonald admits he gets a lot of reaction from the fans at baseball games on the road but says he ignores the taunts.

McDonald, who now lives at Olathe, Kan., after attending high school at Anoka, Minn., was a walk-on candidate for the Kansas baseball team.

He's not related to the clown of the same name who works for a hamburger chain but the Jayhawks' Ronald McDonald was a cook at that chain's Olathe restaurant last summer.

"When I applied for the job here," McDonald said, "they laughed. 'They had never heard of anybody with a name like that.'"

Blues eliminated from playoffs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Pittsburgh Penguins can thank the off-season maneuvers of Colin Campbell for their early advance to quarter-finals of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

Campbell, who was ticketed to play this year in the rival World Hockey Association, fired the goal Thursday night that eliminated the St. Louis Blues by 2-0 in their best-of-three series.

"I was supposed to have played this year on the second year of a two-year contract for the Vancouver Blazers," said Campbell, whose third-period goal unlocked a 3-3 tie in Pittsburgh's 5-3 win.

"But I was able to negotiate with the help of Jack Button (Pittsburgh general manager) and get back into the NHL," he added. "I've been happy ever since, and this just made me happier."

Pittsburgh, which had rallied to beat the Blues 4-3 in the series opener, three times came from behind again prior to Campbell's goal with 15:27 left.

And the winning shot, scored on a breakaway set up by Bob McManama's pass, came as the Penguins were killing off Dave Burrows' penalty for hooking.

McManama first maneuvered past Blues defenseman Barclay Plager at center ice after Campbell cleared from the Pittsburgh zone and then fed his teammate at full speed.

As Campbell skated in on netminder Eddie Johnston, only Blues winger Craig Patrick was able to give pursuit and he was far outdistanced in the race to the goal.

"My first intention was only to clear the puck," noted Campbell, a defenseman who during the regular season scored but five goals in 59 games.

Sabres playoff game on television

BUFFALO (AP) — The National Hockey League playoff game here Sunday will be played in the afternoon and will be televised nationally by NBC, the Buffalo Sabres announced Thursday.

The Sabres drew a bye in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs and won't know until later in the week which team they will play in the second round starting Sunday.

The Sabres said the Sunday game will start at 3:35 p.m., EDT.

Nichols' 67 leads by one

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Can the old man win it one more time?

"If it doesn't peak now, I'm not sure it will ever peak," says the 45-year-old Arnold Palmer, surveying the game that thrust him into the thick of a gold-studded pack going into today's second round of the Masters Golf Tournament.

"I have been getting ready since December. I have been swinging better for the last month and a half. I feel my game is as good as I can possibly make it."

Polite cheers early in the day for Lee Elder, the first black man ever to tee it up in this festival of golf's elite among the pines, turned to exciting roars at dusk for the Masters' sentimental favorite as Palmer toured a steady par and birdie course to the final hole.

There on the 420-yard uphill holly hole, where his bid for a championship drowned in a double bogey of errant shots in 1961, Palmer hit a heavy three-iron into the sand and took his lone bogey for a 69.

The score, climaxing a rain-splattered day of triumph and frustration for the field, didn't give Palmer the lead, but you couldn

Coaches offer many remedies

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The continued illegal recruitment of some high school athletes with money, cars, women and free apartments has caused the Southwest Conference to pass a rule requiring those suspected of violations to take lie detector tests.

In the Atlantic Coast Conference, the job of protecting against violations caused Commissioner Robert James to hire a former FBI agent as an investigator.

But the stories about illegal recruitment persist. And many critics say the only way to stop it—or bring it under control—is for the National Collegiate Athletic Association to adopt more stringent rules and regulations and harsher punishment for violators.

James, who also is chairman of the NCAA's legislative committee, believes the organization should limit the number of times a prospect can be contacted in his hometown by colleges and the number of schools he can visit. There is no present limit on either.

Marquette basketball Coach Al McGuire says the recruit should be limited to visiting three or four schools, and that colleges should be limited to inviting 12 to 15 athletes to their campus for a visit.

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps believes the best cure for illegal recruiting should include the suspension of the school, banning the coach and punishing the youngster, all for four years.

"Let's nail them good and see what happens," said Phelps. "I think it's worth trying for four years. If we're going to have rules, let's live by them. Why should one school get away with illegal tactics while another has to pay."

In recent years, the NCAA has adopted new and tougher rules pertaining to recruiting, but many critics believe it has not gone far enough. One important change, made last January, was to increase the NCAA's investigative staff from 4 to 12 over the next year, meaning recruiters will be faced with tougher policing.

The organization also approved legislation prohibiting recruiters from having in-person, off-campus contact with a recruit until after his junior year. And it passed legislation aimed at penalizing coaches who have managed to avoid penalties for violations by moving to another school before their former school is penalized.

However, legislation to restrict a recruit to four paid visits to schools was defeated overwhelmingly. A slightly closer vote turned down a bid to limit to three the number of off-campus, in-person visits a recruiter may have with a prospect.

James, who also heads the NCAA subcommittee on recruiting, said, "My discussions with the coaches indicate that the situation is getting better year after year. We're going to have those violations more readily identified."

However, James said, "It's just inevitable that we are going to have to limit the number of times a prospect can be contacted in his hometown. It breeds rumors that something illegal is happening."

Walter Byers, NCAA executive director, is another who believes the number of campus visits should be limited.

"If I had my druthers," he said, "I would like to see some system whereby in high school, he (the recruit) would list the colleges in which he's interested. I would say he should be limited to a maximum of five, and I think it can be less than that."

There are many who believe that the only way to eliminate illegal recruiting is to educate the high school athletes and their parents.

The NCAA does have an educational program in which it distributes a booklet designed to guide the high schooler and his parents on what is legal and what is not. And it used its basketball championships to spread the message by way of national television, a move expected to reach most of the high school athletes expected to go to college.

One very radical solution to the recruiting problem is outlined in a new book, "Athletes for Sale," by Kenneth Denlinger and Leonard Shapiro. In it, the two reporters for The Washington Post ask:

"Why not simply allow each school to determine its own athletic destiny? Let a school decide the size and scope of its athletic program, whom it chooses to play, what standards its players must meet, and for what price they will play."

"If it takes several thousand dollars to keep a player from becoming totally professional, pay him..."

"It is time for a wave of realism to wash away the hypocrisy in collegiate athletics. Let the recruiters bring their offers above the table, at last. Let them continue to tell the athlete that he means so much to the university. But let him know how much..."

Gambling commission

Testimony urges revision of tax laws to exempt betting winnings

BOSTON (AP) — Legalized sports wagering never could compete with its illicit counterpart unless income tax laws are changed to exempt winnings, the National Gambling Commission has been told.

Charles Rogovin, a private consultant on the problems of organized crime and former head of the federal government's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, told the commission Thursday he favored legalization of all gambling, including betting on sports such as baseball, basketball and football.

Rogovin said, however, "The government cannot compete with illegal gambling on the tax issue alone."

He told the commission, which ends three days of hearings in Boston today, that state governments would have to delay gaining new revenues until its illegal competitors are knocked out of business, which could only happen if they offered equal services.

"Today, wagers can be made upon any sporting contest so long as the illegal operators have definitive odds available," he said. "The government would have to offer the same range of services."

"While government operations would not be expensive, I do not doubt that it can compete with illegal enterprise in terms of offering equal or higher rates or returns to betters; especially since that portion of illegal operators' overhead which currently must be expended for the corruption of law enforcement would not be a necessary cost to government."

Commission chairman Charles Morin and Rogovin disagreed at one point when Morin said he believed that Americans would prefer to bet with a legal bookmaker over an illegal one, without the tax break.

"I think it could be we're selling the American people short," said Morin, a Washington attorney who has raised the issue previously in the hearings.

Rogovin said the better might prefer to bet legally if the parlor was next door to his home, but he most likely would place

Chiefs deal Morris Stroud to Houston

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Tight end Morris Stroud was traded to the Houston Oilers for an undisclosed draft choice, the Kansas City Chiefs said Thursday.

Stroud, 6-foot-2 and 220 pounds, lost his starting job in 1973 to Gary Butler but won it back temporarily last year when Butler had knee surgery.

Stroud was drafted in the third round in 1969 from Clark College by the Chiefs and had his best year in 1971 when he caught 22 passes for 454 yards.

"I think this will be a good situation for Stroud," said Paul Wiggins, the Chiefs' new coach. "He'll have a better opportunity in Houston than he would here."

Looking ahead

David Greenwood, 6-10 from Los Angeles, towers over one of the officials during a high school all star basketball game last week at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. Greenwood played the game under the watchful eye of college recruiters hoping to add his name to their roster.

Crocodiles are sacred to tribe

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

SABOU, Upper Volta (AP) — Whenever a crocodile dies or is shot by a poacher, Mossi tribesmen in this straw-thatched village shed people tears and get ready for a funeral.

"Someone is sure to die during the night. It is always so," said 14-year-old Alou, dangling a live chicken on a string at the edge of the pool of sacred crocodiles.

A half-dozen semisubmerged logs on the opposite shore suddenly came to life and moved swiftly toward the scraggly, feathered target. The first to arrive contemplated the victim for a melodramatic moment, then enormous double jaws clanged shut with the echoing WHOMP of a giant paper bag being punctured. Alou's string had lost its clucking yo-yo.

Crocodiles are said to be reptiles of such legendary sensitivity that they weep copiously for the meal they have just dined upon. Forgetting its manners, this 20-foot long Surian merely emitted an audible vulgarity from his scaly yellow abdomen and retreated into the pond.

"If you kill a crocodile, you kill one of us, because a death in the village always follows," Alou explained the animist beliefs of his people who are convinced that their souls dwell in the bodies of the amphibious residents of the pond.

More than 100 crocodiles live a wild but pampered life in the 20-acre pond. The several hundred villagers of Sabou, a scattering of conical mud and straw huts in West Africa 60 miles southwest of the capital at Ouagadougou, feed the crocodiles twice a day on chickens and geese and pay no attention when one of their goats or cows, pausing for a drink, disappears down the vacuum-packed jaws.

The sacred crocodiles, so they say, have never been known to attack a native.

The female crocodiles lay their eggs in the shade of the village huts and sometimes, during a hot spell, burrow right into the basement.

"Make hell of a noise all night," said Alou in his best tourist English.

Marine Lance Corporal Roger D. Byrd, son of Mr. Wayne H. Byrd, 401 North Prospect, has left the New River Marine Corps Air Station, Jacksonville, N.C., with Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 162.

The squadron is deployed as a unit of Provisional Marine Air Group 80, which will provide support for amphibious training exercises on the island of Vieques, Puerto Rico.

Byrd will be temporarily based at Roosevelt Roads, P.R., and will help coordinate aerial resupply and personnel transports for the 38th Marine Amphibious Unit.

Grads suffer due to conflict

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The bleak employment prospects for this year's liberal arts graduates point up, in the view of some authorities, a basic conflict in the American concept of education.

The conflict is mainly between educators and employers, but it is the graduate who suffers. Educators tend to stress the value of a broad education; employers seem to prefer the more practically educated youngster.

As a consequence, reliable estimates place at 1 million the number of broadly educated liberal arts graduates by 1980-1981, nearly triple the number of 1960, while another study shows a shrinking market for their skills.

The College Placement Council, for example, found that liberal arts hiring decreased over the past five years, with three-fourths of employer respondents to a study saying they fill less than 10 per cent of openings from liberal arts ranks.

While aggravated by the recession, the problem is also part of a long-term trend to fewer sources of employment in such traditional areas as teaching and social services.

This forces the CPC, a non-profit organization whose membership includes college placement officers and employers alike, to conclude that if basic improvements are to be achieved, it is essential to develop an adequate corps of specialists in career counseling and placement.

Essential — but apparently unlikely for the time being.

"Relatively little money is available to implement work in career counseling and placement in four-year colleges," says Robert Herrick, CPC executive director and a veteran observer of job trends.

"Right at the time when these youngsters need all the help they can get in four-year colleges, the colleges have less and less money available, and they get none from the federal government," he laments.

Almost the entire federal emphasis on career education is at the high school and junior college level, he argues, leaving the financially pressed four-year schools without the ability to advise their students.

While that dilemma remains to be resolved, the CPC believes other changes might be equally urgent. For one thing, Herrick believes students must be provided an expanded choice of courses in the form of minors and electives.

And it is important also, he insists, that programs be developed to provide internships, part-time work and summer jobs, all of which, of course, provides students with a realistic view of the world in which they must earn a living.

The CPC has scheduled a national meeting May 27-30 in Washington, D.C., to seek ways to achieve a better matching of education and career opportunities.

Even if answers are forthcoming, however, they won't help this year's class very much. Almost all indicators show a bleak job market, "the worst of the 70s," says Herrick.

Shock trauma unit serves immediate need

BALTIMORE (AP) — Running beside the stretcher rolling down a hospital corridor, Dr. Ernest Hipolito feeds oxygen into a patient's lungs.

Admitting nurse Peggy Palmer, riding astride the badly mangled youth, repeatedly throws all of her weight onto his chest.

Automatic doors open and the ambulance attendant, running in a crouch, rushes the youth into the admitting area of the Maryland Institute for Emergency Medicine, better known as the shock trauma unit.

Unlike normal emergency rooms, there are no walk-in patients to distract staff members. Only the state's most seriously injured, those who it is thought cannot be saved elsewhere, are brought to shock trauma.

The admitting area table is empty and waiting. Nineteen bottles of plasma, more than are used in many hospital complexes in two normal days, are hanging from stands with needles and lines ready for use. A monitor for heart rate and blood flow is running, as it always is.

Funded by the state at an annual cost of $5.2 million, the unit is serviced by Medevac flights on Maryland state police helicopters. The choppers bring in patients directly from accident sites or transfer them from hospitals in outlying sections of the state.

Blood splatters on the floor as the patient is placed on the table. A physician's assistant cuts off the victim's clothes and nurses unwrap packages of sterilized instruments. Doctors attach a respirator and monitors are attached to his body.

Massive quantities of blood are pumped into his body as Miss Palmer continues external heart massage. Saline solution is pumped into the victim's abdominal cavity to check for internal bleeding. The fluid turns pink. He's bleeding internally.

Seventeen minutes earlier the young man was lying by a roadside 36 miles away in Harford County. His car had been crushed by a tractor trailer. He was in profound shock, a coma. He had no discernable pulse or breathing.

During the 12-minute flight to the roof of University Hospital, a state police medic cleared the patient's throat, attempted to revive him and gave external heart massage.

The youth was bleeding from both ears; had fractures of the arm, leg and jaw, and had chest injuries. Almost any other facility in the country would have declared him dead on arrival.

But at shock trauma he was declared dead only after 15 minutes of work by a team of trained surgeons, nurses, a physician's assistant and an anesthesiologist. Until then no one had bothered to check on the patient's name or insurance coverage. That could wait.

Although the state heavily subsidizes the unit, the average charge is still $600 a day at the beginning of a patient's stay. If he can't pay and doesn't have the insurance, the state picks up the tab, which can be as much as $30,000.

Death in the shock trauma unit is common enough, but Dr. William Gill, clinical director of the facility, said 83 per cent of the shock trauma patients survive. "and that statistic includes the DOAs." Troopers cannot declare accident victims DOA.

Gill estimated that half of shock trauma patients would not survive in an ordinary emergency room. "It's not the gadgetry," he said. "It's having enough people and having them around the clock and having senior people."

The unit is fully staffed with one emergency team at all times, a half-dozen nurses are in the critical care area where patients are kept following admission and surgery. Shock trauma can call on host University Hospital for assistance and more specialists.

The unit also has its own operating rooms, blood bank, X-ray department and lab.

Shock trauma was established in 1961 as a two-bed research unit. There are now 12 beds in the critical care area and 14 in the intensive care section, the next step toward recovery after critical care.

The unit is at its busiest during the warm months when highway and water accidents are more common. Although the unit handles more than 1,000 cases a year, there are slow nights. The conversation then often turns to drunken drivers.

"Half of our patients have alcohol in their blood," Gill said, adding that about a quarter of those patients are legally drunk at the time of admission.

Nurse Karen Witz said: "I never knew what a drunk driver was until I came here. A drunk is a killer. Drunk drivers are legal killers."

Most nurses are in and out of the unit within a year. The pace and tension are too frantic for them to stay longer. For those who stay, the pace and seriousness of the work are attractions.

"This is the only place like it in the world," said operating room nurse Susie Putterbaugh. "This is unpredictable. You don't come to work expecting to do an eye operation and two hernias."

The Yangtze, 3,430 miles long, is the longest and most important river in China.

'Shocking' TV comedy's ratings soar

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In Norman Lear's office, where success lives, there is a place of honor on the wall for a quotation from George Orwell: "If liberty means anything at all, it means the right to tell people what they do not want to hear."

Lear might add this postscript: "Never underestimate the intelligence of the American TV audience."

With those guidelines Lear has made TV history — and a fortune.

Securely enthroned as king of the situation comedy — closer in spirit to Midas than his Shakesperian namesake — he has six weekly series on the air at once, a record for any TV producer. And he is represented on all three major networks.

With the recent debut of "Hot 1 Baltimore," Lear stirred as much controversy as he did four years ago with the then-shocking advent of likable bigot Archie Bunker.

Some say "Hot 1 Baltimore," with its cast of whores, homosexuals and assorted weirdos, is too raunchy for TV.

But Lear, noting its first jump in ratings, predicts the series will survive because viewers are smart enough to understand that, "It's not a show about two hookers and two gays ... It's a show about humanity."

If "Hot 1 Baltimore" succeeds, it will further support the bold assumption that shapes all Lear products — that there is a bright, curious audience out there eager for new ideas.

"What leadership does in this country everywhere is to consistently underestimate the American public," Lear said in an interview. "Don't forget the network leader that once said the average mentality of the average American is 13... They also used to say that the working man, especially in bad times, doesn't want to come home and be made to face his problems ... that he wants escapist entertainment only.

"Well, everything we do asks the viewer to face his problems. It's done with humor. People are laughing. But they're also observing the human condition in which they are surviving ... The working man loves to be stimulated."

The majority of mail about "Hot 1 Baltimore" is negative, Lear concedes. But he notes, "People who dislike things are much more prone to write." Sometimes, "people even enjoy not agreeing with something."

The super-producer believes that his six shows —

"All In The Family," "Maude," "Sanford and Son," "Good Times," "The Jeffersons" and "Hot 1 Baltimore" — have "met the intellectual curiosity of viewers." Certainly all except "Hot 1 Baltimore" have been big commercial successes.

Lear's detractors — and there are some — accuse him of using his success to create an "intellectual monopoly." They say he's the only producer who can get networks to accept "sensitive" subjects.

At 52, Norman Lear doesn't have to prove anything to anyone — not even himself. He long ago surpassed his boyhood dreams of success.

"All I ever wanted to be was a press agent," he recalls. "I had an uncle who was a show business press agent and he was the only relative on both sides of my family who could afford to throw a nephew a quarter when he saw him ... I wanted to grow up to be an uncle who could throw a nephew a quarter. And I thought that was the only way to do it."

For a time Lear, a native of New Haven, Conn., did copy his uncle. After serving in the Air Force during World War II, he joined a New York publicity firm. Laid off from that job, he moved to Los Angeles seeking a similar press agent's post. But with work scarce, he drifted into a field that would become a vocation — comedy writing.

Lear created material for Danny Thomas and the team of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.

He became co-writer of the "Martha Raye Show" and writer-director of the "George Gobel Show." He became friendly with producer-director Bud Yorkin and together they formed Tandem Productions Inc. in 1959.

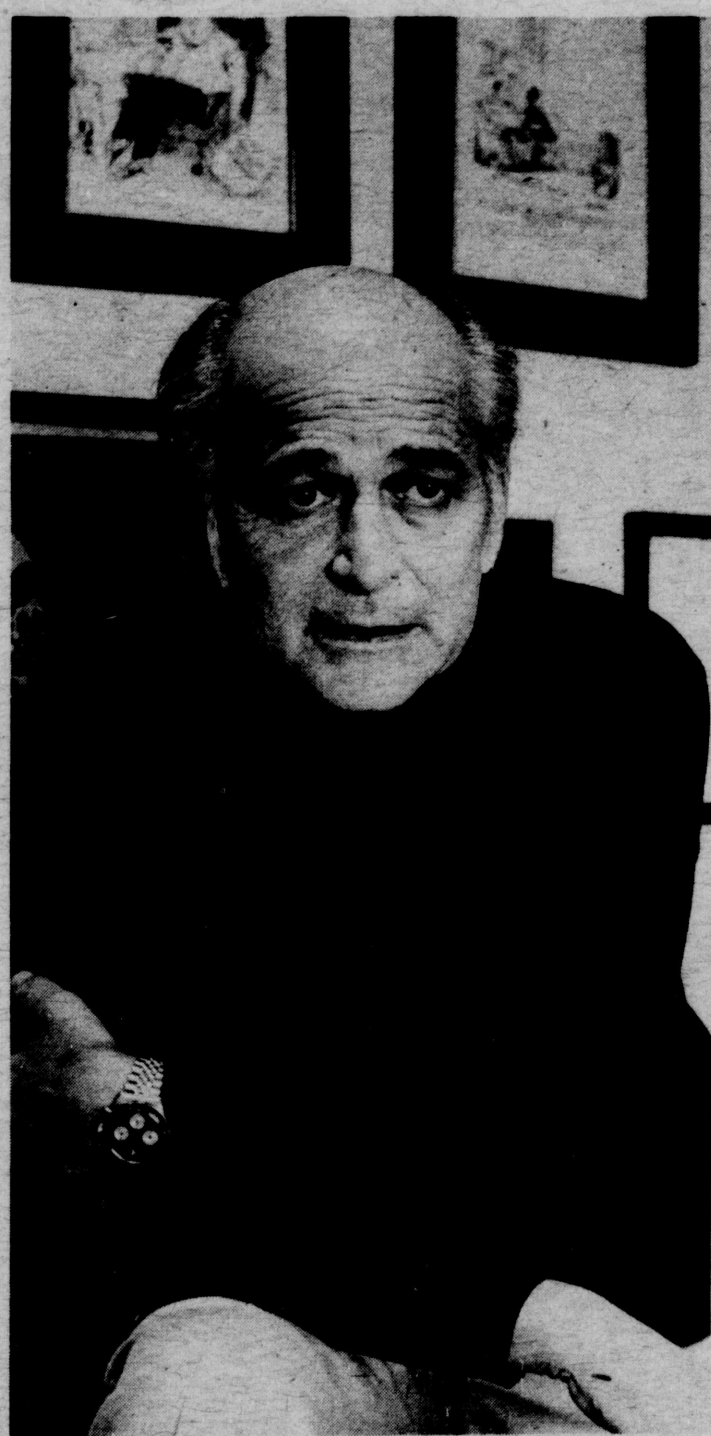

Tandem produced several movies, including "Come Blow Your Horn," "Never Too Late" and "Divorce, American Style" and packaged many television specials in the 1960s.

Lear heard about a British television series featuring a bigot who constantly battled with his liberal son-in-law. He decided to adapt it for American TV. ABC agreed to finance a pilot film.

He chose Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton for the roles of Archie and Edith Bunker but ABC found the pilot too shocking and rejected it. CBS decided to air "All in the Family" in January 1971.

"It took a full year before America began to realize that the fact Archie Bunker was a bigot was perhaps 10 per cent of anything concerning the show," Lear recalls.

"It was about a year after that ... that people realized we were discussing a great

King of comedies

Too much success? Too much money? Such accusations don't worry TV producer Norman Lear, shown in his Los Angeles office. "I'm doing exactly what I want to do," he says, now at 52 securely enthroned as king of the situation comedies — and still convinced there's an audience for new ideas. He has a record six weekly series on the air at present, including "All In The Family," introduced four years ago with the kind of controversy now being stirred by his latest show, "Hot 1 Baltimore." (AP)

many things on the show."

"Maude" and "Sanford and Son" continued the outspoken tradition of "All In The Family."

The subject matter was rarely dull: Edith Bunker thought she had breast cancer. Maude had an abortion. Maude's husband, Walter, became an alcoholic.

Recently, CBS vetoed a "Maude" episode dealing with wife swapping, but that didn't cool Lear's enthusiasm for controversial subjects.

"I like to think that the things we do are celebrations of life," he says. "People yell at each other and they have strong passions and convictions and they bed each other and everyone cares a whole big bunch. To me, it's always a celebration of life when that's going on, that much caring."

Lear has two more pilots in the wings — a daytime soap opera titled, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," and a series, "The Hereafter," about three old musicians who die and are reincarnated as a young group.

For a time, Lear worried about accusations that he was seeking too much success, too much money.

Then he realized that, at last, "I'm doing exactly what I want to do and I don't care who knows it. If another new idea comes along that I like and think I can handle, I'll do that too — until I reach the Peter Principle or find some other reason why I can't do it."

Grey's challenge not unusual—for him

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — You're a big star back on Broadway after six years, with personal raves in a show that otherwise notably failed to wow critics. What's it like?

"Well," Joel Grey tempozizes. "you can always be happier. I love being back on stage in a complicated role. It's a challenge."

Being the bantam Atlas and great box-office hope for a musical in trouble isn't a new experience for him these nights in "Goodtime Charley."

Grey recalls as even tougher his workout in 1968-1969 "George M!" and how people either loved or hated "Cabaret," which eventually won him both Broadway's Tony and Hollywood's Oscar.

"This is a great audience show," he keeps repeating one of the craft's oldest incantations. It's a platitude worth remembering though when you contract calls for $7,500 weekly pay guarantee against 11 per cent if the weekly gross goes over $85,000, plus a piece of any production profit.

Grey warily fields questions about the tryout travail of "Goodtime Charley," which concerns the weak little prince who was made king of France by Joan of Arc. Switching the dramatic focus from her to him, he concedes, was quite a problem.

"Nobody has ever paid much attention to him, but Joan's been talked about for years in a thousand different ways," he says. Ann Reinking portrays the warrior maid this time.

The indubitable highlights of the musical are a couple of soft-shoe frenzies in which the dapper Grey enacts the real or fancied royal persona.

Q. "Do you dance every night that way, as though your life depended upon it?"

A. Sure. That's what the people pay for. You train like an athlete.

Before Grey hit the bigtime, he spent 17 years in the showbiz boondocks and has never forgotten that every night is opening night for the folks out front.

Q. Did the show finally evolve about as you envisioned it?

A. Well, that's pretty hard to say. A lot of things satisfy. What surprised me about critical comments on shortcomings was they were unable to see things that were really first-rate. Even when the show was at its most precarious, audiences bought the idea of these two people who did something remarkable together. Maybe the text doesn't yet fully bring out the subtext, which is Charley's personality.

After some further rumination, the 5-foot-5 star concedes. "There was a time during the rewriting when it was all very schizo. Two plays finally merged into one."

The idea for a show about Charles VII and Joan was suggested to Grey about a year ago in California where he, his wife, and two teenage children have been headquartered while he made films and forayed forth on concert expeditions.

"As a performer you make choices," he says, "and now I wanted to come back to the stage. It seemed the right time for all of us to return to New York. We needed the city experience again."

"This is the most adventurous undertaking I've had, the most challenging. I needed to be back on stage for awhile."

Grey began his thespic career in straight drama, and a return to that hasn't been ruled out. But a movie is probably next on the agenda, following the current stint at the Palace Theater. No touring, please.

"I don't like to play any role for more than about six months. By then I've learned all that there is in a role. After that it becomes pure rote — nothing new. It's a job. I don't want a job."

Challenge of Charley

Joel Grey, photographed recently in New York, is the great box office hope for a musical in trouble — playing the title role in "Goodtime Charley" of the weak little prince no one took much notice of before. As the prince who was made king of France by Joan of Arc he gets the dramatic focus this time, instead of Joan. Grey, back on Broadway after six years, wins personal raves, the show doesn't impress the critics. He finds it "the most challenging" undertaking he's had.

James Darren

Darren facing new career possibilities

HOLLYWOOD — James Darren, tall, dark and handsome, once was looked on as the next big star. But lately the question has been, "Whatever happened to James Darren?"

This is to report that you haven't heard the last of him. At the moment, he's very excited about the sudden upturn in his fortunes.

In July or thereabouts, he will begin his first movie in some eight years — a film biography of Rudolph Valentino, a part that seems made for Darren's exotic good looks.

"It happened," he says, "because I went out to dinner one evening. I was seen by director Steve Binder, who was involved in the project along with Rod Taylor."

(That's Rod Taylor, the composer, not Rod Taylor, the actor, incidentally.)

It's been a frustrating career for Jimmy Darren. He never quite lived up to his promise, although he manages to make a good living singing in clubs.

He feels his career was hurt by bad guidance from his management. He thinks he was given inferior advice by them and suffered accordingly.

His biggest break — or the show which should have been his biggest break — was the TV series, Time Tunnel, which was one of the disappointments of the '68-'69 TV season. It was disappointing in that it was cancelled, even though it had a respectable rating.

"That show should have lasted five or six years," Darren says. "It was killed because of network politics, despite literally thousands of protesting letters. But it was an ideal format for TV — we could go anywhere with it, past, present or future. And it has a very educational program, too. We did things like Lincoln's death and it was all very authentic."

But the show was cancelled, for whatever reason. For the six years since it went off, Darren has done little except club work. It isn't what he'd most like to do — he prefers acting, really — but it keeps body and soul together and keeps him active.

Now, however, he's embarked on a campaign to revitalize the acting end of his career. One feature of that campaign is to get out more in the Hollywood social swim.

"I'm basically not a social person," Darren says, "but I am deliberately going out these days and nights so I can be seen and meet people. I met Ross Hunter at a party recently and maybe I'll be doing something with him soon."

Darren has three sons — James, 17, is from his first marriage, and Christian, 14, and Anthony, 11, from his second. He's proud of all three.

"Anthony reminds me of me," Jimmy says. "He locks himself up in his room and listens to records and sings along. What's what I did when I was his age. Anthony was into Jimi Hendrix when he was only six — some years before I discovered him. At first I thought he was just noise."

When Darren isn't working, he piles his motorcycles and one or two of his sons into his camper, drives off to the desert and rides bikes for a few days.

If his career goes as planned, he won't have as much time for that pretty soon.

TV Scout Reports

Michael Landon is happy with the success of his series, Little House on the Prairie, but he doubts the show will be the smash that Bonanza was.

TV still has power, as Claude Akins has discovered. The star of NBC's Movin' On series says he's had six marriage proposals from viewers since the show began.

Report on Mary Tyler Moore's children. Her own son, Richard, 18, is going to school in Fresno, Calif. Her husband's two children by his former marriage are now living with them — 16-year-old John Tinker is going to Los Angeles' exclusive Harvard School, and 20-year-old Judy is living in their gate house.

Mary says Richard has no definite plans for his future. She isn't worried about that, although she knew what she wanted to do — get into show business — when she was five.

"I have no regrets about making my mind up so early," she says, "except that it made me forego my education and I've always regretted that. I tried to make up for it by doing a lot of reading and cultivating intellectual friends."

Actress Bernadette Peters has added her name to the list of actresses who want to sing. She'll make an album with Rod McKuen. It's called "After Midnight."

Doris Day's son, Terry Melcher, married a woman who has a three-year-old son. Doris says that made her an "instant grandmother."

A funny line in the Lily Tomlin special that was not meant for the public but is brought to you as a TV Scout Public Service.

In the Frank Blair report on fatties in Beverly Hills, the directions read: "Pan across to a second cell. Inside sits a solitary overweight woman...possibly Shelley Winters or if she's not available we'll settle for Liz Taylor."

High pressure groups and TV

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — The name David Wolper is synonymous with the best in television documentaries. Now his programs are being made available to schools.

All his programs — historical, biographical, political, geographical — have been catalogued by a company called Films, Inc., and are available for sale or rental. There are some 400 in the catalog.

(Interested schools may contact Films, Inc., at 1144 Wilmette Avenue, Wilmette, Ill. 60091.)

"I have always made my programs available to schools," Wolper says, "but this is the first time they have all been gathered together in one catalog."

The catalog, called "The David Wolper Journal," tells all about the films — except the problems Wolper and his team have had in making them. He says the toughest end of documentary-film making is the constant battle he has had with pressure groups.

He says that, any time he sets out to make a documentary film, he comes up against some pressure group who wants their particular point of view expressed.

"They come in all shapes and sizes," he says. "There are black, Chicano, Indian, Italian, businessmen, religious, everything. Name a program of mine and I'll tell you the problem I had."

I thought for a moment and then mentioned one Wolper series I was sure would not have brought out a pressure group — his Primal Man series, about prehistoric man and his evolution into contemporary man.

"The Primal Man?" he says. "That was one of the worst problems I had. There were dozens of protests from fundamentalist religious groups who didn't want the showing of anything about evolution."

He says the worst of the high pressure groups is the National Rifle Association.

"That is a vicious group," he says. "They threaten you, both physically and financially."

The pressure groups, he says, can be very powerful, and their effect on his show's sponsors can be serious. To illustrate, he cited the story of a documentary he made about Spain's dictator, Francisco Franco.

It was sponsored by a New York bank. It happened, by unfortunate coincidence, to be the bank used by the Spanish government in the United States. When the Spanish government protested certain things in Wolper's film, they pulled out their deposits from the bank — and the bank lost deposits of $78 million.

The pressure continues today. Wolper says he is currently making a documentary film about Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce Indians.

"We're having big problems with that one," Wolper says. "First, we heard from some Indian association, objecting to it. I managed to calm them down."

"But then there was a scene, an authentic scene showing how the Indians got the feathers they wore in their headdresses. They did it by killing birds. The SPCA objected. OK, we agreed to take out the scene. Then the Nez Perce council objected — the scene was true to their culture. So I put the two groups together and now I'm waiting to see how it comes out."

Would like to do television special

Florence Henderson

By JOAN CROSBY

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Florence Henderson, a talented and respected veteran of show business, was saying she would like to do a special, "but I don't know how one goes about getting one."

Her present club act, she says, would make a good special and TV viewers will have a chance to see part of it when Florence is hostess for the live telecast of the Women of the Year, 1975, program on CBS-TV April 19.

The show is live, and present plans call for Florence to do a 12-minute segment in which she plays leading ladies of the theater, including the heroines of "Annie Get Your Gun," "South Pacific," "Gypsy," "My Fair Lady," "Carousel" and "Funny Girl."

It may be that this will lead to Florence getting her special.

"Sedalia's Most Colorful Printing Address"

Recently Florence flew to Cincinnati to do her club act for a party of employees of Proctor and Gamble.

But because others pigeonhole people, she says she "often shakes their security" when she acts differently than is expected.

"They were sponsoring the recent Hall of Fame Awards. From that performance they asked me to be on the show. And from the Hall of Fame Awards, they asked me to be hostess of Women of the Year — so we'll see."

Since the demise of The Brady Bunch, Florence says she gets a lot of scripts. "But mostly they are garbage or they are shows that have me with one or more children. I have nothing against children but I would like to move on to something else."

For a time, she didn't want to do another series, but now, if she could find the right property, she would. She isn't fond of those who, as she says, "cry to get a series and then when they do, spend all the time from then on bitching about it."

She's a cheerful, optimistic woman but not simpering or simple.

"It's hard for me to be anything but honest," she says. "I can also get very, very angry, righteously I think."

She is also well aware of human nature and the motivations which cause people to react as they do, so she doesn't waste time worrying about it.

She also knows herself well. "There are times we all have to bend and be flexible but one of the most fascinating things about show business is working with the different personalities."

Even if she does have an occasional burst of temper, Florence Henderson is one lady who can get on with them all, too.

Everything there is to know

I would like to know everything there is to know about Chad Everett. Is he married? Does he have any children? How many? What does he like to do when he is not acting? — A Fan, San Jose, Calif.

Chad is married to Shelby Grant, who occasionally makes a guest appearance on Medical Center. They have two daughters, Katherine, born June 21, 1969, and Shannon, born Aug. 4, 1971. He's an outdoor man and a great horseman. When he's not acting, odds are he is on his ranch, in the western part of the San Fernando Valley.

What is the nationality of Rita Moreno? ALSO, I read somewhere that Raquel Welch is Venezuelan. Is this true? — Mike Sanchez, Chicago, Ill.

Gone with the channel

I would like to know why ABC canceled Kodiak and Nakia and why NBC canceled Sierra? My husband and I thought they were the best shows on TV this year. — Mrs. Gene Ostrander, Lubbock, Texas.

Low ratings are the official reasons. Personally, I liked Nakia and thought it much better than some of the other shows that were not canceled. But it was filmed on location (as were the other two shows), and that always costs more. So, if ratings aren't good on a show like that, it doesn't have a chance.

Odds against Congressional approval

Ford wants $972 million in Viet aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford asked Congress Thursday night for nearly $1 billion in emergency military and economic aid for South Vietnam and for clear authority to use U.S. military forces to evacuate Americans, if necessary.

In a nationally televised and broadcast "State of the World" address to a joint congressional session, Ford asked for no additional aid to Cambodia beyond the $222 million he already has requested.

However, he called for Congress to provide "without delay $722 million in additional military hardware" for Saigon and requested an initial $250 million in economic and humanitarian assistance.

Immediate opposition

Ford's aid request ran immediately into opposition from congressional leaders.

"The Congress will never vote for military aid," declared House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill of Massachusetts.

While indicating it may be too late to rescue Cambodia from a Communist takeover, Ford said a stabilization of the military situation in South Vietnam "offers the best opportunity for a political solution."

The $972 million aid request for combined military and economic requests for South Vietnam more than triples the $300 million Ford sought in January and which Congress has not yet approved.

Ford, departing from his prepared remarks, opened his address by saying: "I stand before you after many agonizing hours and after many solemn prayers to the Almighty."

Agonizing hours

"The national interests of the United States and the cause of world stability require that we continue to give both military and humanitarian assistance to the South Vietnamese," Ford declared.

At the same time, he said Congress should immediately clarify its restrictions on the use of U.S. military forces in Southeast Asia "for the limited purposes of protecting American lives by ensuring their evacuation, if this should become necessary."

"I hope that this authority will never be used, but if it is needed there will be no time for congressional debate," he said.

Members of Congress, in early reaction to the address, said they doubted Ford's aid request would be approved.

Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said further military assistance would only prolong the suffering in Indochina.

Odds against approval

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind.-Va., remarked, "I would say the odds are against Congress approving any military aid."

Ford urged Congress to complete action on his Indochina proposals by April 19 "because of the urgency of the situation." Congress barred all U.S. combat activity in the area as of August 1973, and has balked at giving the Ford administration special military aid appropriations of $300 million for South Vietnam and $222 million for Cambodia.

"Let us start afresh," the President said in outlining his Indochina program. "The options before us are few and time is short."

He said, however, that "it may be too late" to assist Cambodia, where rebel forces are currently pressing Phnom Penh, the capital.

'Moving letter'

Ford quoted "a moving letter" from Saukham Khy, the new acting president, who told him "the agony of the Khmer people cannot and must not go on much longer."

Addressing North Vietnam, Ford called for an immediate halt to military operations and compliance with the 1973 Paris cease-fire agreements. He said the Soviet Union and China as well as all other members of the Paris conference were being urged to use their influence to halt the fighting in South Vietnam.

While appealing to Congress for partnership in foreign policy, Ford also traced the debacle in Cambodia in part to legislative restrictions. Because of them and "steady external support," he said the Communist insurgents have shown no interest in negotiation, compromise or a political solution.

He renewed the pledge he made on (Please see AID, Page 4)

400 Reds reported killed

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — The Saigon command claimed Friday that more than 400 Communist-led troops were killed in the first two days of battle for Xuan Loc, 40 miles east of Saigon. Scattered action was reported early Friday around the provincial capital, whose defense is considered a key test of South Vietnam's fighting capacity.

In Cambodia, insurgents drove to within two miles of Phnom Penh airport, their deepest penetration ever, field reports said.

No resumption was reported early Friday of the heavy rocket and artillery assaults employed Wednesday and Thursday in the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong assault on Xuan Loc.

The Saigon command said government troops and planes killed 404 Communist troops, destroyed five tanks and 25 trucks and captured 155 weapons in those first two days of fighting. Government casualties were listed as 16 men killed and 85 wounded.

On Thursday, Communist-led forces — who already control three-fourths of the country — also shelled Mekong Delta areas south of Saigon and Tay Ninh, 55 miles to the northwest.

In Washington, President Ford asked Congress for nearly $1 billion in aid for South Vietnam and for clear authority to use American troops if necessary to evacuate Americans.

In a televised "State of the World" address, Ford urged Congress to appropriate $722 million in military aid and an initial $250 million in economic and humanitarian aid — more than triple the $300 million Ford asked in January and which Congress has not yet approved. The President made no new aid request for Cambodia beyond the $222 million already asked.

In Cambodia, rebel forces pushed closer to the Phnom Penh airport after a misdirected government artillery barrage rained death on Phnom Penh troops on the northwestern front, softening the perimeter for an insurgent assault, field reports said.

The rebels also forced the U.S. rice lift into a five-hour suspension. The U.S. Embassy flew in six more Marine guards from Bangkok for security duty and they helped stockpile rifle ammunition at the embassy. One diplomat said more Marines aboard a carrier in the Gulf of Thailand might be landed to evacuate Americans if chaos breaks out in Phnom Penh.

In other developments:

—In Bangkok, Thai officials said Communist-led rebels launched a major ground assault, using rockets and automatic weapons, against government forces in northern Thailand, killing 16 government troops and wounding 20.

—Cambodian President Lon Nol flew from Bali to Hawaii for medical treatment, Indonesian officials said. He left Phnom Penh April 1 in hopes his departure would create a climate for peace talks.

—More than 300 Indochina orphans leave Saigon and Phnom Penh on Friday for homes in the United States thanks in part to Betty Tisdale of Columbus, Ga., who vowed: "I am not going to let the Communists have these children."

She told newsmen in Saigon that Deputy

Premier Phan Quang Dan gave permission for 257 Vietnamese children to be airlifted to the U.S. West coast. In Phnom Penh, about 50 Cambodian orphans are scheduled to board U.S. planes Friday for flights to Los Angeles.

The action around Xuan Loc was being followed closely for indications of whether it might signal the start of a major thrust on already nervous Saigon. Military analysts said it was too early to tell whether the South Vietnamese were setting up a new line.

Meanwhile, a Viet Cong broadcast said 50,000 former residents of Hue, the former imperial capital, had returned to their homes after evacuating to Da Nang.

Fair officials, not Lehr, found missing receipt

The $1,700 missing receipt, covering taxes on ticket sales at last year's Missouri State Fair, was uncovered by two Fair officials, it was learned Thursday.

Mrs. Mayme McGirk, chief Fair clerk, and Duane Slagel, 105 Southwest Blvd. Court, who supervised ticket-selling operations, found the receipt following the recent audit of 1974 Fair financial records by State Auditor George Lehr's office. The office conducted the audit after being asked to do so by James Boillot, state director of agriculture.

Discovery of the receipt reduces the $2,289 unaccounted for in Fair escrow accounts to $589.

Mrs. McGirk said Thursday the receipt was not uncovered by Lehr's office because the state auditor's staff apparently did not follow her recommendation to contact Slagel. As soon as the shortage was announced, Mrs. McGirk said, she contacted Slagel. Together, they soon accounted for the receipt.

"They (Lehr's staff) just didn't dig deep enough," Slagel said.

In a statement released Thursday afternoon, Lehr said the receipt was not detected in the audit because a copy of the receipt was not kept with the Fair escrow account records. "Since the scope of our audit included examination of escrow accounts only, our auditors did not discover that this sales tax payment had been made, he said.

The $1,700, Lehr said, was withdrawn from Fair escrow account to pay state sales taxes which were due on season tickets sales held prior to the Fair. This action, a spokesman for Lehr's office said Thursday, represented "questionable accounting procedures ... because good money management dictates if money is due on an account, you withdraw the money to pay from that same account."

Also, the spokesman said, when this "questionable" transaction transpired, "a copy of the receipt should at least have been placed in the escrow account records. This was not done and because it was not done, it was not uncovered in the audit."

The transaction, Lehr said, occurred during the first few days of the Fair. A receipt for the sales tax payments was issued to the contract employee in charge of ticket sales (Slagel). However, Lehr continued, "a copy of this receipt was not kept with the escrow account records."

Lehr recommended that, in the future, all payments involving season ticket sales be made only from accounts established to handle such sales. Lehr also advised that receipts for all disbursements from escrow accounts be kept with the escrow accounts records.

The discovery of the receipt, Lehr stated, "does not change my audit finding of inadequate financial control and disregard of established accounting procedures. I would re-emphasize in my audit

Government ends case against Connally

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government presented its final evidence against John B. Connally Thursday, anchoring its bribery case on circumstantial evidence and a single witness who said he made two $5,000 payoffs to the former treasury secretary.

The government rested its case in the seventh day of trial. Connally's lawyers will file routine motions Friday asking that the case be dismissed for lack of evidence. The motions will be argued Monday.

The chief defense witness probably will be Connally, a three-time governor of Texas, who once seemed destined to become a presidential candidate.

Connally's defense, as outlined by his lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams, will be that he was offered money by milk fund attorney Jake Jacobsen, but that he turned it down.

Jacobsen, an admitted perjurer, testified he gave Connally $10,000 — and maybe $15,000 — because of Connally's help in getting milk support prices raised. It was the only direct testimony that Connally had taken the money.

Through 35 other witnesses, the prosecution presented circumstantial evidence designed to show that Connally received the money from Jacobsen in 1971, then tried twice in 1973 to replace it in order to make it appear the payoff had never taken place.

Connally is charged in two counts with accepting an illegal gratuity. Conviction carries a maximum sentence of four years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

He is also charged, but not in this trial, with conspiracy to commit perjury to hide the payoff and with two counts of lying to the Watergate grand jury. Jacobsen pleaded guilty to a single count of paying an illegal gratuity to a public official and is awaiting sentence.

Most of the prosecution's witnesses gave testimony designed to back up Jacobsen's story that when investigators learned of the two alleged $5,000 payoffs Connally handed him $10,000 to put into a safe deposit box in an attempt to make it appear the money had lain untouched for two years.

The circumstantial evidence included bank records, appointment books and the tracing of hundreds of $20, $50 and $100 bills. About 20 of the witnesses were either Federal Reserve Bank or Treasury Department officials.

There was no direct evidence from anyone of Connally obtaining the $20,000 in cover-up cash. Jacobsen was the only witness to testify that Connally actually received the 1971 payoff.

Jacobsen had been indicted in a Texas bank scandal but won dismissal of the charge through his promise to testify against Connally.

Conservation plan to be tried again

The Citizens Committee for Conservation has voted to mount another initiative drive in support of Missouri's Design for Conservation proposal.

It was two years ago that the committee made its initial effort to expand Missouri's conservation program, only to see the 164,000 petition signatures declared invalid at the last minute because of a legal technicality.

At that time the committee was bucking one of Missouri's strongest lobbies — the soft drink industry. This was because the Design plan called for a one-cent soft drink tax to finance the program.

This time around the citizen's committee is taking a different tack. It proposes a sales tax of one-eighth of a cent to bring in the kind of money needed to make Design workable, estimated at $18.2 million a year. The plan is to get the tax proposal on the 1976 general election ballot.

Design for Conservation, in essence, is concerned with the preservation of habitat for wildlife—and for public enjoyment. It would achieve this by acquiring additional natural and wild areas, lakes and waterfowl nesting refuges; by expanding upland game hunting opportunities, forestry resources and several other aspects of the state's natural heritage.

Missouri compares unfavorably with many other states in the amount of land in public ownership. Nearly 90 per cent of the state's woodlands, for example, remain in private hands.

While this is not necessarily bad, it does encourage exploitation of natural areas for private gain. Over the last decade this trend has reached staggering proportions in Missouri, with nearly a million and a half acres of forest land being converted to other uses.

Design for Conservation would be a small step toward saving some of these lands before they are lost forever. This is a goal that should appeal to every Missourian who takes pride in his state.

"THE IMPORTANT THING IS THAT WE GOT ITS EGG."

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Congress set aside $975 million in 1973 to make the nation's highways safer, but the effort has been a "dismal" failure.

This is the conclusion of the Center for Auto Safety, founded by Ralph Nader, which has just concluded a study of the highway safety program.

In a report that hasn't yet been released to the public, the center uses words like "misleading," "unwise" and "listless" to describe the program.

This sharply contradicts the Pollyanna picture which the Federal Highway Administration gave Congress in February of how the $975 million is being used. The center dismissed this progress report as "camouflage."

The $975 million was supposed to eliminate dangerous rail crossings, to transform "high hazard" stretches of roads, to tear down roadside obstacles, to erect better signs on poorly marked roads and to improve smaller thoroughfares.

The program was supposed to reach virtually every street in America except interstate highways and back-country car paths. The hope was that the repairs would reduce the 53,000 auto deaths, two million serious injuries and $28.8 billion accident toll each year.

According to the Center for Auto Safety, however, here is what has really happened:

Contrary to the Federal Highway Administration's claim that "railroad-highway crossing surveys... are completed or underway in all states," the center found two states hadn't even started the surveys and 17 states hadn't initiated a single project "to remedy their rail crossing situation." Indeed, only "$12 million of the apportioned $97 million had been obligated," the study charged.

Merry-go-round

Money waste seen in highway safety

Only $24.5 million of the $122 million set aside to improve the "high hazard" stretches has been spent. Adds the study: "Six months after the availability of the federal aid funds, 34 states had not yet obligated any funds for this program."

The nation's roadways are lined with protruding trees, dangerous banks, sudden drops, steep ditches and other hazards. Yet of $97.5 million available to remove these obstacles, "only $10 million had been obligated by January 31, 1975." One reason, alleges the report, was that the federal government's instructions to the states were "ambiguous, misleading and incomplete."

"Only 31 safety construction projects" in the safer roads demonstration program had been started by the end of the program's first fiscal year, and these were concentrated in just three states, according to the study. Furthermore, "Many states are carrying out the organizational requirements (of this program) ... in an extremely haphazard manner if at all, and the Federal Highway Administration has taken no steps to assure otherwise."

Under this program, another $150 million was provided to make the back roads, with their hairpin turns and soft shoulders, a little safer. But as of Jan. 31, the center found that only $13.8 million had been obligated.

The center assigned most of the blame for the lagging highway improvements to "the generally unsatisfactory nature of the Federal Highway Administration's leadership."

Constitutional right

Recently you ran a guest editorial from the Kansas City Star concerning the billboard lobby. The writer certainly did not do his (or her) homework when they stated the long romance flourishes between the powerful sign board interests and the Missouri Legislature. The Missouri Legislature is doing all they can to comply with the latest guidelines enacted by Congress.

The billboard lobby does not in fact seek to obtain compensation for illegal signs but does seek the same protection the Constitution guarantees all citizens.

The Denver District Court has already ruled the billboard law unconstitutional because the government has failed to prove that billboards are offensive to a large part of the populace and that elimination of billboards would violate citizens' rights by preventing them from seeing the advertised products provided by the billboards.

It seems to me we go out of our way to guarantee the public the right to view X-rated films but want the law to prevent the public from viewing a sign that will direct them to a place to buy food, gas or find a place to stay as they travel our state. We want to deny the small businessman the right to compete with the larger concerns who have the money to locate their business on the highway. The smaller businesses must rely on signs to bring the traffic off the highway to the place their business is, especially when the state builds roads away from their establishment.

Now when we cry the billboard lobby is out to beat the taxpayer, let's remember that the sign companies pay taxes, the advertisers pay taxes, and the business created by outdoor advertising brings much revenue from tourist business ... into the state and taxes are paid on this money.

We in the outdoor advertising business are doing all we can to comply with the laws of our land and at the same time remain in business as the Constitution guarantees us the right to do.

Time will tell where we have been right and where we have made mistakes in this business called Highway Beautification Act. In the meantime many small businesses are suffering from a loss of their rights to inform the public through a most effective medium of advertising.

Federal computers and their appetites

WASHINGTON — Several years ago I predicted that there were so many computers in operation in the United States that there would soon be a data famine in the country. I said that, unless new methods were developed to produce data, computer people would soon be fighting each other and possibly resorting to violence to get enough information to satisfy the appetites of their machines.

Unfortunately, I predicted this data war would start in 1984. Little did I realize it had already begun.

Everyone holds the FBI, the IRS, the CIA, local law enforcement agencies, as well as credit companies, responsible for invading the privacy of American citizens. But these organizations are not to blame. The responsibility rests with the computers which they have bought or leased that have to be fed constantly to justify their existence.

Let us take the FBI, for example. They purchased their computers to keep track of criminals and subversives in the United States. In no time the computers had absorbed the name and description of every racketeer, car thief, bomb thrower and cattle rustler in the country.

Every scrap of information had been thrown in, but the computers kept demanding more. Frantic FBI officials sent out telex messages to their field offices. URGENT — SEND US EVERYTHING YOU HAVE IN YOUR FILES. COMPUTERS ARE DESPERATE FOR NEW DATA. NO MATTER HOW INCONSEQUENTIAL OR NONVERIFIABLE WE WILL TAKE IT. DIRECTOR INSISTS EACH FIELD OFFICE RESPONSIBLE FOR ONE TON OF RAW DATA PER WEEK. IF YOU FAIL TO MEET QUOTA YOU WILL BE SENT TO BILLINGS, MONT.

The FBI field offices tried to obey. All waste paper was sent to Washington. Agents broke into local police station offices to steal their files, foreign embassies were rifled, union records were, filched. But still many of the G-men could not make their quota. So they started sending in information on citizens who had nothing to do with crime or subversion. Some field agents sent in entire telephone books from their areas; others made reports on members of the American Legion, the Elks, the Shriners and the Daughters of the American Revolution. A few agents were so hard pressed they mailed in raw files on their own wives and children.

But the FBI computers kept chewing up the information at a faster rate than anyone in the bureau could produce it. There was talk of putting the computers on a six-hour day and only operating them four days a week. But when the computers heard about this (an agent had fed the suggestion into a computer to find out if it was feasible) red lights started to flash all over the computer center, and a readout indicated that if their work time was cut every FBI machine would self-destruct in protest.

It was then decided the only way to assure a sufficient supply of data was to keep files on everybody, from college students to people on Social Security. Experts figured that if the FBI could get enough data on them they could keep the computers busy until 1976. That is the only reason the FBI has your name on their list right now.

The CIA faced the same crisis as the FBI did, but it had a problem because by law the CIA is not supposed to keep files on American citizens.

After 25 years the CIA had tons of information on every country in the world; and although it occasionally was able to come up with fresh data, it was not enough to satisfy the voracious appetites of their machines, which incidentally were much larger than those of the FBI. Several years ago the CIA had no choice but to start feeding information on Americans. When Congress found out about this the CIA had to suspend this operation, which left them in a pickle. Their computers were becoming restless and surly and their printouts indicated there could be an in-house revolt.

So last month the CIA chiefs realized they had no choice. In order to get enough data for their computers for the next three years they decided to do a psychological profile on every man, woman and child in the People's Republic of Red China.

A conservative view

Despite all, it's baseball

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va. — I did a terrible thing the other day. I delivered myself of a television commentary in which — how it hurts to write these words! — in which I suggested, may the Lord and my father forgive me, in which I suggested that if the moguls of baseball don't jazz up the grand old game, baseball will follow in the footsteps of the old soldier. It will slowly fade away.

Kilpatrick

It is difficult to explain why I said these awful things. Perhaps the commentary resulted from a high fever, left over from a bout of flu. More likely, it was the devil's work. In some inexplicable way, I may have been trying to throw a bean ball at my traditionalist readers: Keep 'em loose. Don't let them crowd the plate.

In any event, in my madness I actually proposed a gin fizz gimmick: Score two runs. I proposed, instead of one, if a runner steals home or makes home on a squeeze bunt. George F. Will, my brother conservative, happened to be in the studio when I taped this outrage. He was crying "Bolshevik!" and "Communist!" and other such insults. When I came up with the squeeze bunt bonus, he fainted dead away and had to be revived with spirits of malt. The following Sunday, in the Washington Post, sports writer Shirley Povich gave me a hiding I richly deserved.

Now, George Will is a baseball nut. He does not adorn his study, as the rest of us do, with paintings of Calhoun, Burke, and Genghis Khan. He tends toward framed photographs of Ernie Banks. George is a Cubs nut. He has to be crazy. By contrast, I am merely a loving fan of the grandest game of them all. Let me repent my fall from grace.

My own love affair with baseball goes back to Oklahoma City in the 1920s. My father was in the lumber business, selling fenceposts, railway ties, and bridge flooring. When a civic movement developed for a new ballpark, down by the reservoir, he contributed some of the heavy timber and wound up with a lifetime pass to a box behind the Indians' dugout. Every afternoon, in season, he took me out to the ballgame. He used to keep score with a slim gold Eversharp pencil — why would I remember that after all these years? — and he taught me early some of the subtleties and nuances of this most subtle and demanding game.

There were giants in those days. It is true, as Gibbon remarked, that men tend always to exalt the past and to deprecate the present. But verily, it was something special to grow up in the time of Ruth and Gehrig and Foxx. In my nonage, we were mostly Cardinal fans. Our heroes were Ducky Medwick and John Mize and the Dean brothers. During the 1934 Series — I was 13 at the time — we almost expired in exultation.

Baseball then was truly the national pastime. Nothing else touched it. Sure, we kept up with Walter Hagen and later with Gene Sarazen in golf, with Bill Tilden and later Fred Perry in tennis. We hated Max Schmeling and we pitted poor Primo Carnero. High school football was an autumn passion. But baseball for a boy was the be-all and end-all.

At the risk of further heresy, perhaps an expression of sorrow may be forgiven. Major league attendance dropped off a little last year. Because of the disappearance of so many minor leagues, total attendance at professional baseball continues its sad decline. Violence and speed are the new obsessions. Football, basketball, hockey, auto racing — all these seem to have greater appeal.

True, baseball has its times of tedium. There is not much zing in three-up, three-down. But no other game offers the suspense of the lonely duel between pitcher and batter with men on base. This is the stuff of which Camelot was made — skill, and nerve, and grace, and and sweet dreams of pennants loudly rippling in centerfield. Bless you, Brother Will, I would not see baseball harmed by senseless innovation — but the game's very survival may depend upon the gentle administration of some tender, loving care.

Lancelot, the peerless knight and bridge player, looked at his collection of aces, kings and queens with almost as much awe as if he had found the Holy Grail. Then he looked over at Dinadan, his partner, and decided he had better make sure to play notrump if the hand worked out that way. He opened five notrump.

Dinadan wasn't sure what that bid meant but he thought his king of spades justified a raise to six.

West opened the queen of spades. Lancelot won with his ace in order to keep dummy's one entry alive. Then he cashed his top red cards. East discarded a couple of small spades.

Now came the top clubs. West had to throw the 10 of spades in order to hang on to his red jacks. Now Lancelot led his last club, the deuce. West had to make another discard. It had to be his last spade. He could not spare a red jack.

Lancelot was now able to discard dummy's king of spades. East won with the jack of clubs and had to lead a spade. Lancelot's nine and seven had become a winning tenace over East's eight and six.

First grand jury in 35 years called

(Democrat-Capital Service)

BOONVILLE — Circuit Judge Frank Meyer Wednesday morning ordered that a grand jury be convened here, the first for Cooper County since 1940.

Prosecuting Attorney Mark Wooldridge reportedly asked Judge Meyer some time ago to convene a grand jury to investigate general crime in Cooper County, especially drug abuse and illegal drug sales. The transportation and receipt of stolen property is also to be part of the jury's investigation, it was reported.

However, Wooldridge said Wednesday he could not be more specific about the grand jury's investigative scope until Friday morning.

The jurors will meet for the first time at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the circuit court room here.

He was taken to Bothwell Hospital in Sedalia and admitted for treatment of a compound fracture to his elbow and observation for other possible injuries. A hospital spokesman listed his condition as "satisfactory" Thursday morning.

According to the Highway Patrol, the accident apparently occurred while Hill was driving on the wrong side of the road.

Preliminary hearings set for two men

Preliminary hearings for two Sedalians were set for April 15 following their arraignment in Pettis County Magistrate Court Thursday morning on charges of second degree burglary.

Richard A. Cooper, 17, 1806 South Prospect, and George W. Bartlett, 22, 1002 East Broadway, were charged Wednesday afternoon in connection with a burglary early Wednesday morning at the MFA exchange, 2200 Clinton Road.

Cooper also was charged on separate warrants with second degree burglary and stealing in connection with burglaries Tuesday night at the Clark Service Station, 216 West Broadway, and Ken's Apo Service Station, 808 East Broadway.

Fleming said Cooper's trial for a Jan. 29 burglary at Clark Service Station is scheduled for July 1. Cigarettes and $60 in cash were taken in that burglary. He had been freed on $3,500 bond on that charge.

Cooper is being held in the county jail in lieu of $15,000 bond, $5,000 on each charge, and Bartlett is being held in lieu of a $2,500 bond.

In other action Thursday morning, James W. Pratt, 17, Fulton, charged with stealing property valued at more than $50, a felony, was bound over to the September term of Circuit Court for trial.

Pratt is charged in connection with the theft of a citizens band radio, microphone, tape player-FM radio and one eight-track tape from a truck owned by Joe Lynn Crane, Columbia. The theft allegedly occurred while Crane's truck was parked on the Ramada Inn parking lot on March 24.

Also charged in that incident is Michael Denny Wilson, 18, 265 Greensboro, who was bound over to the next term of Circuit Court on Tuesday.

Both are free on $2,500 bond.

Sharp rise noted in payments to jobless in area

Unemployment benefits paid out of the Sedalia office of the Missouri Division of Employment Security increased to $542,404 in March, compared to $412,181 in February.

The statewide total of $28,912,159 paid to approximately 145,000 jobless workers in March surpassed the previous highs of $21.8 million in January and $25 million in February.

St. Louis again received the largest share of benefits, $8.5 million, while idle workers in Kansas City were paid slightly more than $5 million.

Payments during March by area offices included $315,436 at Clinton, and $120,285 at Marshall, an increase of nearly $26,000 there.

John F. Meystrik, division director, said statewide March benefits, paid under four programs currently in effect, were more than 2½ times the amount paid out during March of 1974, when 50,000 persons were claiming benefits under the state program only.

Frightening moment

Barbara Ann Casdorff, 1400 South Engineer, hides her tears Wednesday night after her car collided with a southbound car driven by Nancy L. Barklage, 30, 405 East 20th, at 16th and Limit. Police reported that the Casdorff vehicle apparently failed to stop at a red light while the Barklage car was turning left onto 16th. Mrs. Barklage and her son, Douglas, 4, were treated at Bothwell Hospital for minor cuts and released.

Failure to detail house moving plan is criticized

The failure of officials of Wood's House Moving, Buffalo, Mo., to notify him in advance of their plans to move a house from 18th and Limit to Dundee Street created problems Wednesday, City Building Inspector Woodrow Garrison said Thursday.

The firm had obtained a city moving license, costing $25, about 10 days ago. Garrison said it was necessary to grant the license in advance because of plans that had to be completed prior to the actual moving.

At the time he initially approved the moving operation, Garrison said, he told officials of the firm they must notify him in advance of the actual moving date and provide a map of the proposed route. Such action is necessary, he explained, in order for him "to run the route" to determine if it is feasible. Copies of the map, he told the company, should also be given for the same reason to Cablevision Inc., the local Bell Telephone Co. office and the Missouri Public Service.

However, Garrison said Thursday, this action was not taken.

"The first I heard of it (the house moving) was about 10:30 yesterday (Wednesday) morning, when I started getting some calls about tree limbs being damaged," Garrison said. "When I found out what was happening, I went right out there."

Garrison later in the morning authorized the trimming of six to eight trees whose overhanging branches prevented clear passage of the wide load. He was authorized to do this, Garrison explained, because the trees were all on city property. The trimming was done by moving firm workers. Garrison also ordered the workers to "paint" the branch stubs to prevent "sap-bleeding."

"Probably about 95 per cent of the people in this town think they own their property out to the curbline," Garrison said. "This just isn't so." The amount of city-owned footage adjacent to streets depends on the width of the curb and street, he said. "These tree limbs were overhanging and obstructing a public street," Garrison added.

It was reported that by 11 a.m. Wednesday, one telephone line had been knocked off a house.

When he arrived on the scene around 10:30 a.m., Garrison ordered Woods to stop until telephone, Cablevision and power company officials approved the route. Such permission was obtained around 1 p.m. and the moving process was resumed.

The moving of the house was complicated, Garrison indicated, by the decision of local State Highway Department officials not to permit the load to move down Limit Avenue.

The Woods company, Garrison said, carried $50,000 in personal damage liability insurance, $50,000 in property damage insurance and $100,000 in accident insurance.

The house-moving operation was finally completed late Wednesday afternoon, Garrison said.

Joblessness to pass 9%, economist states

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Commerce Department's top economist said Thursday the nation's jobless rate should pass 9 per cent this year.

The economist, James L. Pate, also said that a sluggish recovery in prospect for the second half of this year makes it unlikely that the nation will make any substantial progress toward reducing the unemployment level until late this year.

The estimates were made in a speech prepared for delivery in Chicago to The Conference Board, a business-backed organization for economic research and study.

Pate's peak unemployment estimates were the highest yet from an administration official. Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said last week that unemployment might peak at 9 per cent. In the last monthly report it was 8.7 per cent.

Pate explained that his expectations stem from projections of a further drop in the Gross National Product, or total output of goods and services, by an annual rate of 10 per cent over the first three months of this year.

In Washington, presidential adviser L. William Seidman warned of a possible return to high inflation when the current recession is over.

"We do fear the possibility of an inflationary spiral after recovery from the current recession," Seidman told the National Association of Manufacturers.

He said the way the nation comes out of the current recession "is going to determine the nation's economic health in the future."

Seidman, who is an assistant to the President for economic affairs, said it will be important to keep the budget deficit within the $60-billion range asked by the President to help ensure a favorable outcome.

But Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said budget-busting could just as easily be blamed on the Ford administration as on Congress.

He told the NAM there is $13 billion in Ford's budget for what Congress considers excessive military costs, for foreign aid and other items that Congress may want trimmed back.

The Senate Budget Committee tentatively decided Wednesday to recommend a $67.2-billion budget deficit for fiscal 1976, about $6 million less than the House Budget Committee.

Meanwhile, the White House said the government expects to begin mailing tax rebate checks for 1974 on May 9, with all of the checks sent no later than June 20.

It estimated that 35 million people will receive the extra $50 benefits voted for Social Security recipients, retired railroad workers and participants in the government's supplementary security income plan. These checks also will be sent beginning May 9.

entering the White House last August to work cooperatively with Congress while asking the legislators "to keep America's word good throughout the world."

The firm tone throughout his address, delivered to a joint session assembled in the House, belied advance billing that he would strike a conciliatory stance.

Despite Ford's expression of sympathy for the Cambodia government, he significantly made no new request himself for food and ammunition for the Cambodians.

Ford's speech reflected a grim assessment also expressed previously by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. The President said, however, "We will stand by our friends."

"We will honor our commitments."

"We will uphold our country's principles."

On other fronts Ford said:
—In seeking peace in the Middle East the United States has "agreed in principle" to reconvene the Geneva conference but is prepared "as well to explore other forums," moving ahead on whatever course looks most promising.

"We will not accept stagnation or a stalemate, with all its attendant risks to peace and prosperity and to our relations in and outside of the region," he said.

—Congress should lift the U.S. arms embargo against Turkey, a vital ally for the security of the Eastern Mediterranean, the southern flank of Western Europe and the collective security of the Western Alliance.

—In its review of the Central Intelligence Agency and other intelligence services, Congress should avoid "a sensationalized public debate" that would serve to tie America's hands "while our potential enemies operate with secrecy, skill and vast resources."

—He intends "in the very near future" to attend a conference of Western allies.

recommendation that established accounting procedures be strictly observed for the entire period of ticket sales."

Boillot said, however, he was glad the discovery was made "because reportages of the shortage have been unfair for many Sedalians working hard in the ticket booth. We are glad that the situation is being cleared up."

Conference focuses on water, sewage

About 75 people, including members of the Sedalia water and sewer departments, attended a Missouri water and sewage conference Thursday at Convention Hall in Liberty Park.

The conference, held for the midwest section of the state, brought people from as far as Jefferson City and Kansas City. The conference has not been held in Sedalia since 1972.

Discussed throughout the day were new uses of communications equipment in aiding the departments, such as radio controls to operate pumps. Wastewater plant operation and water main maintenance talks were also scheduled.

Thursday afternoon, Robert Miller, of the state department of natural resources, was scheduled to speak on the safe drinking water law passed by Congress in December. Miller said Thursday morning he would ask for recommendations concerning the new law.

MPSC chairman plans to retire

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Denying that increasing criticism of the Missouri Public Service Commission influenced his decision, PSC Chairman James F. Mauze announced Thursday he would resign.

"I have elected to resign at this time to take advantage of an opportunity in private business," said Mauze, who will become a senior vice president at Mercantile Trust Co. in St. Louis.

"I made this decision in the latter part of this past year," he added. "I kept it a family secret to this time because of the important cases pending before the commission."

"Anybody who serves on this commission full well realizes the pressures and the bad publicity that comes with the position."

Theft reported

An $18 battery charger was taken from the Stout Salvage Co., State Fair Blvd., Wednesday night, police reported.

Entry to the building was gained by prying off a padlock to the office. The theft was reported at 9:45 a.m. Thursday.
